beseech ▶ verb (past and past participle besought or beseeched) [reporting verb] poetic/literary ask someone urgently and fervently to do or give something: [with obj. and infinitive] they beseeched him to stay | [with obj. and direct speech] 'You have got to believe me,' Violet beseeched him | [with obj.] they earnestly beseeched his forgiveness.
– DERIVATIVES beseechingly adverb.
– ORIGIN Middle English: from BE- (as an intensifier) + Old English sēcan (see SEEK).

beset ▶ verb (besetting; past and past participle beset) [with obj.] 1 (of a problem or difficulty) trouble or threaten persistently: the social problems that beset the UK | she was beset with self-doubt.
■ surround and harass: I was beset by clouds of flies.
■ hem in: the ship was beset by ice and finally sank.
2 archaic (be beset with) be covered or studded with: springy grass all beset with tiny jewel-like flowers.
– PHRASES besetting sin a fault to which a person or institution is especially prone.
– ORIGIN Old English besettan, from BE- 'about' + settan (see SET[1]).

2 in addition to; apart from: he commissioned work from other artists beside Minton.
– PHRASES beside oneself overcome with worry, grief, or anger; distraught: she was beside herself with anguish. beside the point see POINT.
– ORIGIN Old English be sīdan (adverb) 'by the side' (see BY, SIDE).

USAGE It is sometimes said that beside should not be used to mean 'apart from' and that besides should be used instead (he commissioned work from other artists besides Minton rather than he commissioned work from other artists beside Minton). Although there is little logical basis for such a view, and in standard English both beside and besides are used for this sense, it is worth being aware of the potential ambiguity in the use of beside: beside the cold meat, there are platters of trout and salmon means either 'the cold meat is next to the trout and salmon' or 'apart from the cold meat, there are also trout and salmon'.

besides ▶ preposition in addition to; apart from: I have no other family besides my parents | besides being a player, he was my friend.
▶ adverb in addition; as well: I'm capable of doing the work, and a lot more besides.

▶ adverb 1 in or along the space separating two objects or regions: layers of paper with tar in between | from Leipzig to Dresden, with the gentle Elbe flowing between.

2 in the period separating two points in time: sets of exercises with no rest in between.

– PHRASES between ourselves (or you and me) in confidence: just between you and me, I don't think it was going to happen. (in) between times (or whiles) in the intervals between other actions.

– ORIGIN Old English betwēonum, from be 'by' + a Germanic word related to TWO.

USAGE In standard English it is correct to say between you and me but incorrect to say between you and I. Why is this? A preposition such as between takes the object case and is correctly followed by object pronouns such as me, him, her, and us rather than subject pronouns such as I, he, she, and we. Thus it is correct to say between us or between him and her and it is clearly incorrect to say between we or between he and she. The mistake between you and I arises from a confusion between what follows a preposition and what ordinarily comes at the beginning of a sentence in the subject case. Many people know that it is not correct to say John and me went to the shops and that the correct sentence is John and I went to the shops. Thus, people concerned about correcting mistakes in one context have assumed that 'and me' should in all cases be replaced by 'and I'. In trying to avoid one kind of error, another one has been created.

biocenosis ▶ noun US spelling of BIOCOENOSIS.

biocentrism ▶ noun [mass noun] the view or belief that the rights and needs of humans are not more important than those of other living things.
– DERIVATIVES biocentric adjective, biocentrist noun.

biochemistry ▶ noun [mass noun] the branch of science concerned with the chemical and physico-chemical processes which occur within living organisms.
■ processes of this kind: abnormal brain biochemistry.
– DERIVATIVES biochemical adjective, biochemically adverb, biochemist noun.

biochip ▶ noun a microchip designed or intended to function in a biological environment, especially inside a living organism.
■ a logical device analogous to the silicon chip, whose components are formed from biological molecules or structures.

biocide ▶ noun 1 a poisonous substance, especially a pesticide.
2 [mass noun] the destruction of life: our whims have brought us to the brink of biocide.
– DERIVATIVES biocidal adjective.

biocircuit ▶ noun an integrated circuit incorporating biological molecules or structures.

bioclast /ˈbʌɪəʊklast/ ▶ noun Geology a fragment of a shell or fossil forming part of a sedimentary rock.
– DERIVATIVES bioclastic adjective.

bioclimatic ▶ adjective Ecology of or relating to the interrelation of climate and the activities and distribution of living organisms.

biocoenosis /ˌbʌɪə(ʊ)sɪˈnəʊsɪs/ (US biocenosis) ▶ noun (pl. -noses /-siːz/) Ecology an association of different organisms forming a closely integrated community.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: modern Latin, from BIO- 'life' + Greek koinōsis 'sharing' (from koinos 'common').

biocompatible ▶ adjective (especially of material used in surgical implants) not harmful or toxic to living tissue.
– DERIVATIVES biocompatibility noun.

biocomputer ▶ noun a computer based on circuits and components formed from biological molecules or structures which would be smaller and faster than an equivalent computer built from semiconductor components.
■ a human being, or the human mind, regarded as a computer.

biocomputing ▶ noun [mass noun] the design and construction of computers using biochemical components.
■ an approach to programming that seeks to emulate or model biological processes. ■ computing in a biological context or environment.

biocontrol ▶ noun short for BIOLOGICAL CONTROL.

biodata ▶ plural noun [treated as sing. or pl.] biographical details.
■ [treated as sing.] Indian a curriculum vitae.

biodegradable ▶ adjective (of a substance or object) capable of being decomposed by bacteria or other living organisms and thereby avoiding pollution.
– DERIVATIVES biodegradability noun.

biodegrade ▶ verb [no obj.] (of a substance or object) be decomposed by bacteria or other living organisms.
– DERIVATIVES biodegradation noun.

bio-diesel ▶ noun [mass noun] a biofuel intended as a substitute for diesel.

biodiversity ▶ noun [mass noun] the variety of plant and animal life in the world or in a particular habitat. A high level of biodiversity is usually considered to be important and desirable.

biodynamics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] 1 the study of physical motion or dynamics in living systems.
2 a method of organic farming involving the observation of lunar phases and planetary cycles and the use of incantations and ritual substances.
– DERIVATIVES biodynamic adjective.

bioelectric ▶ adjective of or relating to electricity or electrical phenomena produced within living organisms.
– DERIVATIVES bioelectrical adjective.

bioenergetics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] 1 the study of the transformation of energy in living organisms.
2 a system of alternative psychotherapy based on the belief that emotional healing can be aided through resolution of bodily tension.
– DERIVATIVES bioenergetic adjective.

bioengineering ▶ noun [mass noun] 1 another term for GENETIC ENGINEERING.
2 the use of artificial tissues, organs, or organ components to replace damaged or absent parts of the body.
3 the use in engineering or industry of organisms or biological processes.
– DERIVATIVES bioengineer noun & verb.

bioethics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the ethics of medical and biological research.
– DERIVATIVES bioethical adjective, bioethicist noun.

biofeedback ▶ noun [mass noun] the use of electronic monitoring of a normally automatic bodily function in order to train someone to acquire voluntary control of that function.

bioflavonoid ▶ noun any of a group of compounds occurring mainly in citrus fruits and blackcurrants, formerly regarded as vitamins.

biofouling ▶ noun [mass noun] the fouling of underwater pipes and other surfaces by organisms such as barnacles and algae.

biofuel ▶ noun a fuel derived immediately from living matter.

biog ▶ noun informal a biography.
– ORIGIN 1940s: abbreviation.

biogas ▶ noun [mass noun] gaseous fuel, especially methane, produced by the fermentation of organic matter.

biogenesis /bʌɪə(ʊ)ˈdʒɛnɪsɪs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the synthesis of substances by living organisms.
■ historical the hypothesis that living matter arises only from other living matter.
– DERIVATIVES biogenetic adjective.

biogenic /ˌbʌɪə(ʊ)ˈdʒɛnɪk/ ▶ adjective produced or brought about by living organisms: biogenic sediments.

biogeochemical ▶ adjective relating to or denoting the cycle in which chemical elements and simple substances are transferred between living systems and the environment.
– DERIVATIVES biogeochemist noun, biogeochemistry noun.

biogeography ▶ noun [mass noun] the branch of biology that deals with the geographical distribution of plants and animals.
– DERIVATIVES biogeographer noun, biogeographic adjective, biogeographical adjective, biogeographically adverb.

biography ▶ noun (pl. -ies) an account of someone's life written by someone else.
■ [mass noun] writing of such a type as a branch of literature. ■ the course of a person's life: although their individual biographies are different, both are motivated by a similar ambition.
– DERIVATIVES biographer noun, biographic adjective, biographical adjective, biographically adverb.
– ORIGIN late 17th cent.: from French biographie or modern Latin biographia, from medieval Greek, from bios 'life' + -graphia 'writing'.

biohazard ▶ noun a risk to human health or the environment arising from biological work, especially with micro-organisms.

Bioko /bɪ'əʊkəʊ/ an island of Equatorial Guinea, in the eastern part of the Gulf of Guinea. Its chief town is Malabo, the capital of Equatorial Guinea. Former names FERNANDO PÓO (until 1973) and MACIAS NGUEMA (1973–9).

biolistics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] a technique in genetic engineering in which tiny metal pellets coated with DNA are propelled into living cells at high velocities.
– DERIVATIVES biolistic adjective.
– ORIGIN late 20th cent.: apparently from BIO- and BALLISTICS.

biological ▶ adjective of or relating to biology or living organisms.
■ another term for NATURAL (in sense 3). ■ (of a detergent or other cleaning product) containing enzymes to assist the process of cleaning. ■ relating to, involving, or denoting the use of toxins of biological origin or micro-organisms as weapons of war.
– DERIVATIVES biologically adverb.

biological clock ▶ noun an innate mechanism that controls the physiological activities of an organism which change on a daily, seasonal, yearly, or other regular cycle.

biological control ▶ noun [mass noun] the control of a pest by the introduction of a natural enemy or predator.

biologism /bʌɪ'ɒlədʒɪz(ə)m/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the interpretation of human life from a strictly biological point of view.
– DERIVATIVES biologistic adjective.

biology ▶ noun [mass noun] the study of living organisms, divided into many specialized fields that cover their morphology, physiology, anatomy, behaviour, origin, and distribution.
■ the plants and animals of a particular area: the biology of the Chesapeake Bay. ■ the physiology, behaviour, and other qualities of a particular organism or class of organisms: human biology.
– DERIVATIVES biologist noun.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: coined in German, via French from Greek bios 'life' + -LOGY.

bioluminescence ▶ noun [mass noun] the biochemical emission of light by living organisms such as glow-worms and deep-sea fishes.
■ the light emitted in such a way.
– DERIVATIVES bioluminescent adjective.

biomagnetism ▶ noun [mass noun] the interaction of living organisms with magnetic fields.

biomass ▶ noun [mass noun] the total quantity or weight of organisms in a given area or volume.
■ organic matter used as a fuel, especially in a power station for the generation of electricity.

biomathematics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the science of the application of mathematics to biology.

biome /'bʌɪəʊm/ ▶ noun Ecology a large naturally occurring community of flora and fauna occupying a major habitat, e.g. forest or tundra.
– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: from BIO- 'life' + -OME.

biomechanics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the study of the mechanical laws relating to the movement or structure of living organisms.

biomedical ▶ adjective of or relating to both biology and medicine.
– DERIVATIVES biomedicine noun.

biometry /bʌɪ'ɒmɪtrɪ/ (also biometrics /bʌɪə(ʊ)-'metrɪks/) ▶ noun [mass noun] the application of statistical analysis to biological data.
– DERIVATIVES biometric adjective, biometrical adjective, biometrician noun.

biomimetic ▶ adjective Biochemistry relating to or denoting synthetic methods which mimic biochemical processes.

biomorph ▶ noun a decorative form or object based on or resembling a living organism.
■ a graphical representation of an organism generated on a computer, used to model evolution.
– DERIVATIVES biomorphic adjective.

bionic ▶ adjective having artificial body parts, especially electro-mechanical ones.
■ informal having ordinary human powers increased by or as if by the aid of such devices (real or fictional): working out in gymnasiums to become bionic men. ■ of or relating to bionics.
– DERIVATIVES bionically adverb.
– ORIGIN 1960s: from BIO- 'human', on the pattern of electronic.

bionics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the study of mechanical systems that function like living organisms or parts of living organisms.

bionomics /ˌbʌɪə(ʊ)'nɒmɪks/ ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the study of the mode of life of organisms in their natural habitat and their adaptations to their surroundings; ecology.
– DERIVATIVES bionomic adjective.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from BIO- 'life', on the pattern of economics.

biophilia ▶ noun [mass noun] (according to a theory of the biologist E.O. Wilson) an innate and genetically determined affinity of human beings with the natural world.
– ORIGIN 1980s: from BIO- + PHILIA.

biophysics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the science of the application of the laws of physics to biological phenomena.
– DERIVATIVES biophysical adjective, biophysicist noun.

biopic ▶ noun informal a biographical film.

biopolymer ▶ noun a polymeric substance occurring in living organisms, e.g. a protein, cellulose, or DNA.

bioprospecting ▶ noun [mass noun] the search for plant and animal species from which medicinal drugs and other commercially valuable compounds can be obtained.
– DERIVATIVES bioprospector noun.
– ORIGIN 1990s: from bio(diversity) prospecting.

biopsy /'bʌɪɒpsɪ/ ▶ noun (pl. -ies) an examination of tissue removed from a living body to discover the presence, cause, or extent of a disease.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: coined in French from Greek bios 'life' + opsis 'sight', on the pattern of necropsy.

biopsychology ▶ noun [mass noun] the branch of psychology concerned with its biological and physiological aspects.
– DERIVATIVES biopsychological adjective.

bioreactor ▶ noun an apparatus in which a biological reaction or process is carried out, especially on an industrial scale.

bioregion ▶ noun a region defined by characteristics of the natural environment rather than by man-made divisions.
– DERIVATIVES bioregional adjective.

bioregionalism ▶ noun [mass noun] advocacy of the belief that human activity should be largely restricted to within the boundaries of distinct ecological and geographical regions.
– DERIVATIVES bioregionalist noun.

bioremediation /ˌbʌɪə(ʊ)rɪˌmiːdɪ'eɪʃ(ə)n/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the use of either naturally occurring or deliberately introduced micro-organisms to consume and break down environmental pollutants, in order to clean up a polluted site.

biorhythm ▶ noun a recurring cycle in the physiology or functioning of an organism, such as the daily cycle of sleeping and waking.
■ a cyclic pattern of physical, emotional, or mental activity said to occur in the life of a person.
– DERIVATIVES biorhythmic adjective.

BIOS /'bʌɪɒs/ ▶ noun Computing a set of computer instructions in firmware which control input and output operations.
– ORIGIN acronym from Basic Input-Output System.

bioscience ▶ noun any of the life sciences.
– DERIVATIVES bioscientist noun.

bioscope ▶ noun S. African dated a cinema or film.

biosensor ▶ noun a device which uses a living organism or biological molecules, especially enzymes or antibodies, to detect the presence of chemicals.

biosocial ▶ adjective of or relating to the interaction of biological and social factors.

biosolids ▶ plural noun organic matter recycled from sewage, especially for use in agriculture.

biosphere ▶ noun the regions of the surface and atmosphere of the earth or another planet occupied by living organisms.
– DERIVATIVES biospheric adjective.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: coined in German from Greek bios 'life' + sphaira (see SPHERE).

biostatistics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the branch of statistics that deals with data relating to living organisms.
– DERIVATIVES biostatistical adjective, biostatistician noun.

biostratigraphy /ˌbʌɪə(ʊ)strə'tɪgrəfɪ/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the branch of stratigraphy concerned with fossils and their use in dating rock formations.
– DERIVATIVES biostratigrapher noun, biostratigraphic adjective, biostratigraphical adjective, biostratigraphically adverb.

biosynthesis ▶ noun [mass noun] the production of complex molecules within living organisms or cells.
– DERIVATIVES biosynthetic adjective.

biosystematics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] taxonomy based on the study of the genetic evolution of plant and animal populations.
– DERIVATIVES biosystematist noun.

biota /bʌɪ'əʊtə/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Ecology the animal and plant life of a particular region, habitat, or geological period: the biota of the river.
– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: modern Latin, from Greek biotē 'life'.

biotech ▶ noun short for BIOTECHNOLOGY.

biotechnology ▶ noun [mass noun] the exploitation of biological processes for industrial and other purposes, especially the genetic manipulation of micro-organisms for the production of antibiotics, hormones, etc.
– DERIVATIVES biotechnological adjective, biotechnologist noun.

biotecture /'bʌɪəʊˌtɛktʃə/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the use of living plants as an integral part of the design of buildings.
– ORIGIN 1980s: from BIO- 'of living organisms' + a shortened form of ARCHITECTURE.

biotic /bʌɪ'ɒtɪk/ ▶ adjective of, relating to, or resulting from living things, especially in their ecological relations.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from French biotique, or via late Latin from Greek biōtikos, from bios 'life'.

biotin /'bʌɪətɪn/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry a vitamin of the B complex, found in egg yolk, liver, and yeast. It is involved in the synthesis of fatty acids and glucose. Also called VITAMIN H, especially in North America.
– ORIGIN 1930s: coined in German from Greek bios 'life' + -IN[1].

biotite /'bʌɪətʌɪt/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a black, dark brown, or greenish black micaceous mineral, occurring as a constituent of many igneous and metamorphic rocks.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: named after J.-B. Biot (1774–1862), French mineralogist.

biotope /'bʌɪətəʊp/ ▶ noun Ecology the region of a habitat associated with a particular ecological community.
– ORIGIN 1920s: from German Biotop, based on Greek topos 'place'.

bioturbation /ˌbʌɪəʊtə:'beɪʃ(ə)n/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Geology the disturbance of sedimentary deposits by living organisms.
– DERIVATIVES bioturbated adjective.

biotype ▶ noun a group of organisms having an identical genetic constitution.

bipartisan /ˌbʌɪpɑːtɪ'zan/ ▶ adjective of or involving the agreement or cooperation of two political parties that usually oppose each other's policies: the reforms received considerable bipartisan approval.
– DERIVATIVES bipartisanship noun.

bipartite /bʌɪ'pɑːtʌɪt/ ▶ adjective involving or made by two separate parties: the bipartite system of grammar and secondary modern schools.
■ technical consisting of two parts: a bipartite uterus.
– ORIGIN late Middle English (in the sense 'divided into two parts'): from Latin bipartitus, past participle of bipartire, from bi- 'two' + partire 'to part'.

Blood /blʌd/ ▶ noun (pl. same or Bloods) a member of a North American Indian people belonging to the Blackfoot Confederacy.

blood ▶ noun [mass noun] 1 the red liquid that circulates in the arteries and veins of humans and other vertebrate animals, carrying oxygen to and carbon dioxide from the tissues of the body: drops of blood.
■an internal bodily fluid, not necessarily red, which performs a similar function in invertebrates. ■ figurative violence involving bloodshed: a commando operation full of blood and danger. ■ figurative a person's downfall or punishment, typically as retribution: the press is baying for blood.

Blood consists of a mildly alkaline aqueous fluid (plasma) containing red cells (erythrocytes), white cells (leucocytes), and platelets; it is red when oxygenated and purple when deoxygenated. Red blood cells carry the protein haemoglobin, which gives blood its colour and can combine with oxygen, thus enabling the blood to carry oxygen from the lungs to the tissues. White blood cells protect the body against the invasion of foreign agents (e.g. bacteria). Platelets and other factors present in plasma are concerned in the clotting of blood, preventing haemorrhage. In medieval science and medicine, blood was regarded as one of the four bodily humours, believed to be associated with a confident and optimistic temperament.

both ▶ predeterminer, determiner, & pronoun used for emphasis to refer to two people or things, regarded and identified together: [as predeterminer] both his parents indulged him | I urge you to read both these books | [as determiner] she held on with both hands | he was blind in both eyes | [as pronoun] a picture of both of us together | Jackie and I are both self-employed | he looked at them both.
▶ adverb used before the first of two alternatives to emphasize that the statement being made applies to each (the other alternative being introduced by 'and'): it has won favour with both young and old | studies of zebra finches, both in the wild and in captivity.
– PHRASES have it both ways benefit from two incompatible ways of thinking or behaving: countries cannot have it both ways: the cost of a cleaner environment may sometimes be fewer jobs.
– ORIGIN Middle English: from Old Norse báthir.

USAGE When both is used in constructions with and, the structures following 'both' and 'and' should be symmetrical in well-formed English. Thus, studies of zebra finches, both in the wild and in captivity is better than, for example, studies of zebra finches, both in the wild and captivity. In the second example, the symmetry of 'in the wild' and 'in captivity' has been lost. Other examples: her article is detrimental both to understanding and to peace (not her article is detrimental to both understanding and to peace).

Burton-upon-Trent a town in west central England, in Staffordshire; pop. 59,600 (1981). The town is noted for its breweries.

Burundi /bʊ'rʊndi/ a central African country on the east side of Lake Tanganyika, to the south of Rwanda; pop. 5,800,000 (est. 1991); official languages, French and Kirundi (a Bantu language); capital, Bujumbura.

Inhabited mainly by Hutu and Tutsi peoples, the area formed part of German East Africa from the 1890s until the First World War, after which it was administered by Belgium. The country became an independent monarchy in 1962 and a republic in 1966. Multiparty elections in 1993 resulted in the country being led for the first time by a member of the Hutu majority rather than the traditionally dominant Tutsis; this led within months to large-scale ethnic violence.

– DERIVATIVES Burundian adjective & noun.

– ORIGIN Italian, literally 'charcoal kiln', perhaps influenced by carbonata, a dish of charcoal-grilled salt pork.

carbonate /ˈkɑːbəneɪt/ ▶ noun a salt of the anion CO_3^{2-}, typically formed by reaction of carbon dioxide with bases.

▶ verb [with obj.] [usu. as adj. carbonated] dissolve carbon dioxide in (a liquid): a carbonated soft drink.
■ Chemistry convert into a carbonate, typically by reaction with carbon dioxide.
– DERIVATIVES carbonation noun.

carbonatite /kɑːˈbɒnətʌɪt/ ▶ noun Geology a lava or other igneous rock composed chiefly of carbonates rather than silicates.

carbon black ▶ noun [mass noun] a fine carbon powder used as a pigment, made by burning hydrocarbons in insufficient air.

carbon copy ▶ noun a copy of written or typed material made with carbon paper.
■ figurative a person or thing identical or very similar to another: the trip was a carbon copy of the previous one.

carbon cycle ▶ noun 1 the series of processes by which carbon compounds are interconverted in the environment, chiefly involving the incorporation of carbon dioxide into living tissue by photosynthesis and its return to the atmosphere through respiration, the decay of dead organisms, and the burning of fossil fuels.
2 Astronomy the cycle of thermonuclear reactions believed to occur in stars, in which carbon nuclei are repeatedly formed and broken down in the conversion of hydrogen into helium.

carbon dating ▶ noun [mass noun] the determination of the age of an organic object from the relative proportions of the carbon isotopes carbon-12 and carbon-14 that it contains. The ratio between them changes as radioactive carbon-14 decays and is not replaced by exchange with the atmosphere.

carbon dioxide ▶ noun [mass noun] a colourless, odourless gas produced by burning carbon and organic compounds and by respiration. It is naturally present in air (about 0.03 per cent) and is absorbed by plants in photosynthesis.
● Chem. formula: CO_2.

carbon disulphide ▶ noun [mass noun] a colourless toxic flammable liquid used as a solvent, especially for rubber and sulphur.
● Chem. formula: CS_2.

carbon fibre ▶ noun [mass noun] a material consisting of thin, strong crystalline filaments of carbon, used as a strengthening material, especially in resins and ceramics: [as modifier] a carbon-fibre brake disc.

carbon fixation ▶ noun [mass noun] Biology the incorporation of carbon into organic compounds by living organisms, chiefly by photosynthesis in green plants.

carbonic /kɑːˈbɒnɪk/ ▶ adjective of or relating to carbon or its compounds, especially carbon dioxide.

carbonic acid ▶ noun [mass noun] a very weak acid formed in solution when carbon dioxide dissolves in water.
● Chem. formula: H_2CO_3.

carbonic acid gas ▶ noun archaic term for CARBON DIOXIDE.

carbonic anhydrase /anˈhʌɪdreɪz/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry an enzyme which catalyses the conversion of dissolved bicarbonates into carbon dioxide.

Carboniferous /ˌkɑːbəˈnɪf(ə)rəs/ ▶ adjective Geology of, relating to, or denoting the fifth period of the Palaeozoic era, between the Devonian and Permian periods.
■ (the Carboniferous) [as noun] the Carboniferous period or the system of rocks deposited during it.

The Carboniferous lasted from about 363 to 290 million years ago. During this time the first reptiles and seed-bearing plants appeared, and there were extensive coral reefs and coal-forming swamp forests.

carbonium ion /kɑːˈbəʊnɪəm/ ▶ noun Chemistry an organic cation in which the positive charge is located on a carbon atom.
– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: carbonium from CARBO- 'carbon', on the pattern of ammonium.

carbonize (also -ise) ▶ verb [with obj.] convert into carbon, typically by heating or burning, or during fossilization: the steak was carbonized on the outside.
■ [usu. as adj. carbonized] coat with carbon.
– DERIVATIVES carbonization noun.

carbon monoxide ▶ noun [mass noun] a colourless, odourless toxic flammable gas formed by incomplete combustion of carbon.
● Chem. formula: CO.

carbonnade /ˌkɑːbəˈnɑːd, -ˈneɪd/ ▶ noun a rich beef stew made with onions and beer.
– ORIGIN mid 17th cent. (denoting a piece of meat or fish cooked on hot coals): from French, from Latin carbo, -onis 'coal, charcoal'.

carbon paper ▶ noun [mass noun] thin paper coated with carbon or another pigmented substance, used for making copies of written or typed documents.

carbon steel ▶ noun [mass noun] steel in which the main alloying element is carbon, and whose properties are chiefly dependent on the percentage of carbon present.

carbon tax ▶ noun a tax on fossil fuels, especially those used by motor vehicles, intended to reduce the emission of carbon dioxide.

carbon tetrachloride ▶ noun [mass noun] a colourless toxic volatile liquid used as a solvent, especially for fats and oils.
● Chem. formula: CCl_4.

carbonyl /ˈkɑːbənʌɪl, -nɪl/ ▶ noun [as modifier] Chemistry of or denoting the divalent radical =C=O, present in such organic compounds as aldehydes, ketones, amides, and esters, and in organic acids as part of the carboxyl group: carbonyl compounds.
■ [count noun] a coordination compound in which one or more carbon monoxide molecules are bonded as neutral ligands to a central metal atom: [with modifier] nickel carbonyl.

carbonyl chloride ▶ noun another term for PHOSGENE.

car boot sale ▶ noun Brit. an outdoor sale at which people sell things, typically from the boots of their cars.

carborundum /ˌkɑːbəˈrʌndəm/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a very hard black solid consisting of silicon carbide, used as an abrasive.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent. (originally US, as a trademark): blend of CARBON and CORUNDUM.

carboxyhaemoglobin /kɑːˌbɒksɪˌhiːməˈgləʊbɪn/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry a compound formed in the blood by the binding of carbon monoxide to haemoglobin. It is stable and therefore cannot absorb or transport oxygen.

carboxyl /kɑːˈbɒksʌɪl, -sɪl/ ▶ noun [as modifier] Chemistry of or denoting the acid radical —COOH, present in most organic acids: the carboxyl group.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from CARBO- + OX- 'oxygen' + -YL.

carboxylase /kɑːˈbɒksɪleɪz/ ▶ noun Biochemistry an enzyme which catalyses the addition of a carboxyl group to a specified substrate.

carboxylate /kɑːˈbɒksɪleɪt/ Chemistry ▶ noun a salt or ester of a carboxylic acid.
▶ verb [with obj.] add a carboxyl group to (a compound): [as adj. carboxylated] carboxylated polysaccharides.
– DERIVATIVES carboxylation noun.

carboxylic acid /ˌkɑːbɒkˈsɪlɪk/ ▶ noun Chemistry an organic acid containing a carboxyl group. The simplest examples are methanoic (or formic) acid and ethanoic (or acetic) acid.

carboy ▶ noun a large globular glass bottle with a narrow neck, typically protected by a frame and used for holding acids or other corrosive liquids.
– ORIGIN mid 18th cent.: from Persian karāba 'large glass flagon'.

car bra ▶ noun see BRA.

carbuncle /ˈkɑːbʌŋk(ə)l/ ▶ noun 1 a severe abscess or multiple boil in the skin, typically infected with staphylococcus bacteria.
2 a bright red gem, in particular a garnet cut en cabochon.
– DERIVATIVES carbuncular adjective.
– ORIGIN Middle English (in sense 2): from Old French charbuncle, from Latin carbunculus 'small coal', from carbo 'coal, charcoal'.

carburation /ˌkɑːbjʊˈreɪʃ(ə)n/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the process of mixing air with a fine spray of liquid hydrocarbon fuel, as in an internal-combustion engine.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from archaic carburet 'combine or charge with a hydrocarbon' + -ATION.

carburetted (US carbureted) ▶ adjective (of a vehicle or engine) having fuel supplied through a carburettor, rather than an injector.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from archaic carburet 'carbide' + -ED[2].

carburettor /kɑːbjʊˈrɛtə, -bə-/ (also carburetter, US carburetor) ▶ noun a device in an internal-combustion engine for mixing air with a fine spray of liquid fuel.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from archaic carburet 'combine or charge with a hydrocarbon' + -OR[1].

carburize /ˈkɑːbjʊrʌɪz, -bə-/ (also -ise) ▶ verb [with obj.] add carbon to (iron or steel), in particular by heating in the presence of carbon to harden the surface.
– DERIVATIVES carburization noun.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from French carbure 'carbide' + -IZE.

carcajou /ˈkɑːkədʒuː, -əʒuː/ ▶ noun North American term for WOLVERINE.
– ORIGIN early 18th cent.: from Canadian French, apparently of Algonquian origin (compare with KINKAJOU).

carcass (Brit. also carcase) ▶ noun the dead body of an animal.
■ the trunk of an animal such as a cow, sheep, or pig, for cutting up as meat. ■ the remains of a cooked bird after all the edible parts have been removed. ■ derogatory or humorous a person's body, living or dead: my obsession will last while there's life in this old carcass. ■ the structural framework of a building, ship, or piece of furniture. ■ figurative the remains of something being discarded, dismembered, or worthless: the floor is littered with the carcasses of newspapers.

cardio- /'kɑ:dɪəʊ/ ▶ combining form of or relating to the heart: cardiograph | cardiopulmonary.
– ORIGIN from Greek kardia 'heart'.

cardiogram /'kɑ:dɪə(ʊ)gram/ ▶ noun a record of muscle activity within the heart made by a cardiograph.

cardiograph /'kɑ:dɪə(ʊ)grɑ:f/ ▶ noun an instrument for recording heart muscle activity, such as an electrocardiograph.
– DERIVATIVES cardiographer noun, cardiography noun.

cardioid ▶ noun Mathematics a heart-shaped curve traced by a point on the circumference of a circle as it rolls around another identical circle.
■ (also cardioid microphone) a directional microphone with a pattern of sensitivity of this shape.
▶ adjective of the shape of a cardioid.
– ORIGIN mid 18th cent.: from Greek kardioeidēs 'heart-shaped', from kardia 'heart' + eidos 'form'.

cardiology ▶ noun [mass noun] the branch of medicine that deals with diseases and abnormalities of the heart.
– DERIVATIVES cardiological adjective, cardiologist noun.

cardiomegaly /ˌkɑ:dɪəʊ'mɛgəli/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine abnormal enlargement of the heart.
– ORIGIN 1960s: from CARDIO- + Greek megas, megal- 'great'.

cardiomyopathy /ˌkɑ:dɪəʊmʌɪ'ɒpəθi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine chronic disease of the heart muscle.

cardiopulmonary ▶ adjective Medicine of or relating to the heart and the lungs.

cardiorespiratory ▶ adjective Medicine relating to the action of both heart and lungs.

cardiovascular ▶ adjective Medicine of or relating to the heart and blood vessels.

carditis /kɑ:'dʌɪtɪs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine inflammation of the heart.

card key ▶ noun another term for KEY CARD.

cardoon /kɑ:'du:n/ ▶ noun a tall thistle-like southern European plant related to the globe artichoke, with leaves and roots that may be used as vegetables.
• Cynara cardunculus, family Compositae.

– DERIVATIVES centremost adjective.
– ORIGIN late Middle English: from Old French, or from Latin centrum, from Greek kentron 'sharp point, stationary point of a pair of compasses', related to kentein 'to prick'.

USAGE The construction centre round or centre around (as opposed to centre on) has been denounced as incorrect since it first appeared in the middle of the 19th century. The argument is that it is illogical, since 'centre' designates a fixed point and the prepositions around/round are not used to refer to fixed points. The use is very well established, however, and, given the extension of the sense away from geometrical exactitude, it is difficult to sustain the argument that it is incorrect. A quarter of the citations in the Oxford Reading Programme for this sense are for the construction centre around/round.

– DERIVATIVES centurial adjective.
– ORIGIN late Middle English (in sense 3): from Latin centuria, from centum 'hundred'. Sense 1 dates from the early 17th cent.

USAGE 1 Strictly speaking, centuries run from 01 to 100, meaning that the new century begins on the first day of the year 01 (i.e. 1 January 1901, 1 January 2001, etc.). In practice and in popular perception, however, the new century is held to begin when the significant digits in the date change, i.e. on 1 January 2000, when 1999 becomes 2000.
2 Since the 1st century ran from the year 1 to the year 100, the ordinal number (i.e. second, third, fourth, etc.) used to denote the century will always be one digit higher than the corresponding cardinal digit(s). Thus, 1066 is a date in the 11th century, 1542 is a date in the 16th century, and so on.

century plant ▶ noun a large stemless agave with long spiny leaves, which produces a very tall flowering stem after many years of growth and then dies. Also called AMERICAN ALOE.
