personal pronoun ▶ noun each of the pronouns in English (I, you, he, she, it, we, they, me, him, her, us, and them) comprising a set that shows contrasts of person, gender, number, and case.

USAGE The correct use of personal pronouns is one of the most debated areas of English usage. I, we, they, he, and she are subjective personal pronouns, which means they are used as the subject of the sentence, often coming before the verb (she lives in Paris; we are leaving). Me, us, them, him, and her, on the other hand, are objective personal pronouns, which means that they are used as the object of a verb or preposition (John hates me; his father left him; I did it for her). This explains why it is not correct to say John and me went to the shops: the personal pronoun is in subject position, so it must be I not me. Using the pronoun alone makes the incorrect use obvious: me went to the shops is clearly not acceptable. This analysis also explains why it is not correct to say he came with you and I: the personal pronoun is governed by a preposition (with) and is therefore objective, so it must be me not I. Again, a simple test for correctness is to use the pronoun alone: he came with I is clearly not acceptable. (See also usage at BETWEEN.)
Where a personal pronoun is used alone without the context of a verb or a preposition, however, the traditional analysis starts to break down. Traditionalists sometimes argue, for example, that she's younger than me and I've not been here as long as her are incorrect and that the correct forms are she's younger than I and I've not been here as long as she. This is based on the assumption that than and as are conjunctions and so the personal pronoun is still subjective even though there is no verb (in full form it would be she's younger than I am). Yet for most native speakers the supposed 'correct' form does not sound natural at all and is almost never used in speech. It would perhaps be more accurate to say that, in modern English, those personal pronouns listed above as being objective are used neutrally—i.e. they are used in all cases where the pronoun is not explicitly subjective. From this it follows that, despite the objections of prescriptive grammarians (whose arguments are based on Latin rather than English), it is standard accepted English to use any of the following: Who is it? It's me!; she's taller than him, I didn't do as well as her.

● Genus Phascogale, family Dasyuridae: two species.
– ORIGIN modern Latin, from Greek phaskōlos 'purse' + galē 'weasel'.

phase /feɪz/ ▶ noun 1 a distinct period or stage in a process of change or forming part of something's development: the final phases of the war | [as modifier] phase two of the development is in progress.
■ a stage in a person's psychological development, especially a period of temporary unhappiness or difficulty during adolescence or a particular stage during childhood: most of your fans are going through a phase. ■ each of the aspects of the moon or a planet, according to the amount of its illumination, especially the new moon, the first quarter, the full moon, and the last quarter. ■ each of the separate events in an eventing competition.
2 Zoology a genetic or seasonal variety of an animal's coloration.
■ a stage in the life cycle or annual cycle of an animal.
3 Chemistry a distinct and homogeneous form of matter (i.e. a particular solid, liquid, or gas) separated by its surface from other forms.
4 Physics the relationship in time between the successive states or cycles of an oscillating or repeating system (such as an alternating electric current or a light or sound wave) and either a fixed reference point or the states or cycles of another system with which it may or may not be in synchrony.
■ each of the electrical windings or connections of a polyphase machine or circuit.
5 Linguistics (in systemic grammar) the relationship between a catenative verb and the verb that follows it, as in she hoped to succeed and I like swimming.
■ a structure containing two verbs in such a relationship.
▶ verb [with obj.] (usu. be phased) 1 carry out (something) in gradual stages: the work is being phased over a number of years | [as adj. phased] a phased withdrawal of troops.
■ (phase something in/out) introduce into (or withdraw from) use in gradual stages: our armed forces policy was to be phased in over 10 years.
2 Physics adjust the phase of (something), especially so as to synchronize it with something else.
– PHRASES in (or out of) phase being or happening in (or out of) synchrony or harmony: the cabling work should be carried out in phase with the building work.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent. (denoting each aspect of the moon): from French phase, based on Greek phasis 'appearance', from the base of phainein 'to show'.

phase angle ▶ noun Physics an angle representing a difference in phase, 360 degrees (2π radians) corresponding to one complete cycle.
■ Astronomy the angle between the lines joining a given planet to the sun and to the earth.

phase contrast ▶ noun [mass noun] the technique in microscopy of introducing a phase difference between parts of the light supplied by the condenser so as to enhance the outlines of the sample, or the boundaries between parts differing in optical density.

phase diagram ▶ noun Chemistry a diagram representing the limits of stability of the various phases in a chemical system at equilibrium, with respect to variables such as composition and temperature.

phase-lock ▶ verb [with obj.] Electronics fix the frequency of (an oscillator or a laser) relative to a stable oscillator of lower frequency by a method that utilizes a correction signal derived from the phase difference generated by any shift in the frequency.

phase modulation ▶ noun [mass noun] Electronics variation of the phase of a radio or other wave as a means of carrying information such as an audio signal.

phaser ▶ noun 1 an instrument that alters a sound signal by phasing it.
2 (in science fiction) a weapon that delivers a beam that can stun or annihilate.

phase rule ▶ noun Chemistry a rule relating the possible numbers of phases, constituents, and degrees of freedom in a chemical system.

phase shift ▶ noun Physics a change in the phase of a waveform.

phase space ▶ noun Physics a multidimensional space in which each axis corresponds to one of the coordinates required to specify the state of a physical system, all the coordinates being thus represented so that a point in the space corresponds to a state of the system.

phase velocity ▶ noun Physics the speed of propagation of a sine wave or a sinusoidal component of a complex wave, equal to the product of its wavelength and frequency.

phasic /ˈfeɪzɪk/ ▶ adjective of or relating to a phase or phases.
■ chiefly Physiology characterized by occurrence in phases rather than continuously: phasic and tonic stretch reflexes.

phasing ▶ noun [mass noun] the relationship between the timing of two or more events, or the adjustment of this relationship: graphical techniques were used to investigate the phasing of traffic lights.
■ the modification of the sound signal from an electric guitar or other electronic instrument by introducing a phase shift into either of two copies of it and then recombining them. ■ the action of dividing a large task or process into several stages: the phasing of the overall project.

Phasmida /ˈfazmɪdə/ 1 Entomology an order of insects that comprises the stick insects and leaf insects. They have very long bodies that resemble twigs or leaves.
2 Zoology a class of nematodes that includes the parasitic hookworms and roundworms. Also called SECERNENTEA.
– DERIVATIVES phasmid noun & adjective.
– ORIGIN modern Latin (plural), from Latin phasma 'apparition', from Greek.

phasor /ˈfeɪzə/ ▶ noun Physics a line used to represent a complex electrical quantity as a vector.
– ORIGIN 1940s: from PHASE, on the pattern of vector.

phat /fat/ ▶ adjective black slang excellent: a London crew with a really phat funk sound.
– ORIGIN 1970s (originally used to describe a woman, in the sense 'sexy, attractive'): of uncertain origin.

phatic /ˈfatɪk/ ▶ adjective denoting or relating to language used for general purposes of social interaction, rather than to convey information or ask questions. Utterances such as hello, how are you? and nice morning, isn't it? are phatic.
– ORIGIN 1920s: from Greek phatos 'spoken' or phatikos 'affirming'.

PhD ▶ abbreviation for Doctor of Philosophy.
– ORIGIN from Latin philosophiae doctor.

pheasant ▶ noun a large long-tailed game bird native to Asia, the male of which typically has very showy plumage.
● Family Phasianidae: several genera and many species, in particular the common pheasant (Phasianus colchicus), which has been widely introduced for shooting.
– ORIGIN Middle English: from Old French fesan, via Latin from Greek phasianos '(bird) of Phasis', the name of a river in the Caucasus, from which the bird is said to have spread westwards.

pheasantry ▶ noun (pl. -ies) a place where pheasants are reared or kept.

pheasant's eye ▶ noun a plant of the buttercup family which has scarlet flowers with dark centres, native to southern Europe and SW Asia.

• Adonis annua, family Ranunculaceae.

pheasant shell ▶ noun a small marine mollusc which has a glossy white shell with red-brown markings. The foot bears a conspicuous white operculum.
• Family Phasianellidae, class Gastropoda: Phasianella, Tricolia, and other genera, including the European T. pullus.

Pheidippides /fʌɪ'dɪpɪdi:z/ (5th century BC), Athenian messenger. He was sent to Sparta to ask for help after the Persian landing at Marathon in 490 and is said to have covered the 250 km (150 miles) in two days on foot.

phen- ▶ combining form variant spelling of PHENO- shortened before a vowel (as in phenelzine).

phenanthrene /fɪ'nanθri:n/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a crystalline hydrocarbon present in coal tar.
• A tricyclic compound: chem. formula: $C_{14}H_{10}$.

phencyclidine /fɛn'sʌɪklɪdi:n/ (abbrev.: PCP) ▶ noun [mass noun] a synthetic compound derived from piperidine, used as a veterinary anaesthetic and in hallucinogenic drugs such as angel dust.
– ORIGIN 1950s: from PHENO- + CYCLO- + a shortened form of PIPERIDINE.

phenelzine /fə'nɛlzi:n/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine a synthetic compound used as a monoamine oxidase inhibitor.
– ORIGIN 1950s: from PHENO- + e(thy)l + (hydra)zine.

pheno- (also phen- before a vowel) ▶ combining form
1 Chemistry derived from benzene: phenobarbitone.
2 showing: phenotype.
– ORIGIN sense 1 from French phényle 'phenyl', from Greek phaino- 'shining'; both senses from Greek phainein 'to show'.

phenobarbital /ˌfi:nə(ʊ)'bɑ:bɪt(ə)l, ˌfɛn-/ ▶ noun US term for PHENOBARBITONE.

phenobarbitone /ˌfi:nə(ʊ)'bɑ:bɪtəʊn, ˌfɛn-/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine a narcotic and sedative barbiturate drug used chiefly to treat epilepsy.

phenocopy /'fi:nə(ʊ)kɒpi/ ▶ noun (pl. -ies) Genetics an individual showing features characteristic of a genotype other than its own, but produced environmentally rather than genetically.

phenocryst /'fi:nə(ʊ)krɪst, 'fɛn-/ ▶ noun Geology a large or conspicuous crystal in a porphyritic rock, distinct from the groundmass.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from French phénocryste, from Greek phainein 'to show' + krustallos 'crystal'.

phenol /'fi:nɒl/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a mildly acidic toxic white crystalline solid obtained from coal tar and used in chemical manufacture, and in dilute form (under the name carbolic) as a disinfectant.
• Chem. formula: C_6H_5OH.
■ [count noun] any compound with a hydroxyl group linked directly to a benzene ring.
– DERIVATIVES phenolic adjective.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from French phénole, based on phène 'benzene'.

phenology /fɪ'nɒlədʒi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the study of cyclic and seasonal natural phenomena, especially in relation to climate and plant and animal life.
– DERIVATIVES phenological adjective.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from PHENOMENON + -LOGY.

phenolphthalein /ˌfi:nɒl'(f)θali:n, -'(f)θeɪl-/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a colourless crystalline solid (pink in alkaline solution) used as an acid–base indicator and medicinally as a laxative.
• Chem. formula: $C_{20}H_{14}O_4$.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from PHENOL + -phthal- (from NAPHTHALENE) + -IN[1].

phenol red ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a red dye which is used as a pH indicator and (in medicine) injected in testing kidney function.

phenom ▶ noun N. Amer. informal a person who is outstandingly talented or admired; a star.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: abbreviation of PHENOMENON.

phenomena plural form of PHENOMENON.

phenomenal ▶ adjective 1 very remarkable; extraordinary: the town expanded at a phenomenal rate.
2 perceptible by the senses or through immediate experience: the phenomenal world.
– DERIVATIVES phenomenalize (also -ise) verb (only in sense 2), phenomenally adverb.

phenomenalism ▶ noun [mass noun] Philosophy the doctrine that human knowledge is confined to or founded on the realities or appearances presented to the senses.
– DERIVATIVES phenomenalist noun & adjective, phenomenalistic adjective.

phenomenology /fɪˌnɒmɪ'nɒlədʒi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Philosophy the science of phenomena as distinct from that of the nature of being.
■ an approach that concentrates on the study of consciousness and the objects of direct experience.
– DERIVATIVES phenomenological adjective, phenomenologically adverb, phenomenologist noun.

phenomenon ▶ noun (pl. phenomena) 1 a fact or situation that is observed to exist or happen, especially one whose cause or explanation is in question: glaciers are unique and interesting natural phenomena.
■ a remarkable person, thing, or event.
2 Philosophy the object of a person's perception; what the senses or the mind notice.
– ORIGIN late 16th cent.: via late Latin from Greek phainomenon 'thing appearing to view', based on phainein 'to show'.

USAGE The word phenomenon comes from Greek, and its plural form is phenomena, as in these phenomena are not fully understood. It is a mistake to treat phenomena as if it were a singular form, as in this is a strange phenomena.

phenothiazine /ˌfi:nəʊ'θʌɪəzi:n, ˌfɛnəʊ-/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a synthetic compound which is used in veterinary medicine to treat parasitic infestations of animals.
• A heterocyclic compound; chem. formula: $C_{12}H_9NS$.
■ [count noun] Psychiatry any of a group of derivatives of this compound with tranquillizing properties, used as tranquillizers in the treatment of mental illness.

phenotype /'fi:nə(ʊ)tʌɪp/ ▶ noun Biology the set of observable characteristics of an individual resulting from the interaction of its genotype with the environment.
– DERIVATIVES phenotypic adjective, phenotypical adjective, phenotypically adverb.
– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: from German Phaenotypus (see PHENO-, TYPE).

phentolamine /fɛn'tɒləmi:n/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine a synthetic compound used as a vasodilator, especially in certain cases of hypertension.
– ORIGIN 1950s: from PHEN- + tol(yl) (an isomeric cyclic radical derived from toluene) + AMINE.

phenyl /'fi:nʌɪl, 'fɛnɪl/ ▶ noun [as modifier] Chemistry of or denoting the radical $-C_6H_5$, derived from benzene by removal of a hydrogen atom: a phenyl group.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from French phényle, from Greek phaino- 'shining' (because first used in names of compounds denoting by-products of the manufacture of gas used for illumination).

phenylalanine /ˌfi:nʌɪl'aləni:n, ˌfɛnɪl-/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry an amino acid widely distributed in plant proteins. It is an essential nutrient in the diet of vertebrates.

Philip[1] the name of five kings of ancient Macedonia, notably:
■Philip II (382–336 BC), father of Alexander the Great, reigned 359–336; known as Philip II of Macedon. He unified and expanded ancient Macedonia as well as carrying out a number of army reforms. His victory over Athens and Thebes at the battle of Chaeronea in 338 established his hegemony over Greece.
■Philip V (238–179 BC), reigned 221–179. His expansionist policies led to a series of confrontations with Rome, culminating in his defeat and his resultant loss of control over Greece.

Philip[2] the name of six kings of France:
■Philip I (1052–1108), reigned 1059–1108.
■Philip II (1165–1223), son of Louis VII, reigned 1180–1223; known as Philip Augustus. After mounting a series of campaigns against the English kings Henry II, Richard I, and John, Philip succeeded in regaining Normandy (1204), Anjou (1204), and most of Poitou (1204–5).
■Philip III (1245–1285), reigned 1270–85; known as Philip the Bold.
■Philip IV (1268–1314), son of Philip III, reigned 1285–1314; known as Philip the Fair. He continued to extend French dominions, waging wars with England (1294–1303) and Flanders (1302–5).
■Philip V (1293–1322), reigned 1316–1322; known as Philip the Tall.
■Philip VI (1293–1350), reigned 1328–50; known as Philip of Valois. The founder of the Valois dynasty, Philip came to the throne on the death of Charles IV, whose only child was a girl and barred from ruling. His claim was challenged by Edward III of England; the dispute developed into the Hundred Years War.

Philip[3] the name of five kings of Spain:
■Philip I (1478–1506), reigned 1504–6; known as Philip the Handsome. Son of the Holy Roman emperor Maximilian I, in 1496 Philip married the infanta Joanna, daughter of Ferdinand of Aragon and Isabella of Castile. After Isabella's death he ruled Castile jointly with Joanna, establishing the Habsburgs as the ruling dynasty in Spain.
■Philip II (1527–98), son of Charles I, reigned 1556–98. Philip came to the throne following his father's abdication. His reign was dominated by an anti-Protestant crusade which exhausted the Spanish economy. His Armada against England (1588) ended in defeat.
■Philip III (1578–1621), reigned 1598–1621.
■Philip IV (1605–1665), reigned 1621–1665.
■Philip V (1683–1746), grandson of Louis XIV, reigned 1700–24 and 1724–46. The selection of Philip as successor to Charles II, and Louis XIV's insistence that Philip remain an heir to the French throne, gave rise to War of the Spanish Succession (1701–14). In 1724 Philip abdicated in favour of his son Louis I, but returned to the throne following Louis's death.

Phoenicia /fəˈniːʃə/ an ancient country on the shores of the eastern Mediterranean, corresponding to modern Lebanon and the coastal plains of Syria. It consisted of a number of city states, including Tyre and Sidon, and was a flourishing centre of Mediterranean trade and colonization during the early part of the 1st millennium BC.
– ORIGIN from Latin, from Greek Phoinikē.

Phoenician /fəˈnɪʃ(ə)n, -ˈniː-/ ▶ noun 1 a member of a Semitic people inhabiting ancient Phoenicia and its colonies. The Phoenicians prospered from trade and manufacturing until the capital, Tyre, was sacked by Alexander the Great in 332 BC.
2 [mass noun] the Semitic language of this people, written in an alphabet that was the ancestor of the Greek and Roman alphabets.
▶ adjective of or relating to Phoenicia or its colonies, or its people, language, or alphabet.

Phoenix[1] /ˈfiːnɪks/ Astronomy a southern constellation (the Phoenix), west of Grus.
■[as genitive Phoenicis /fɪˈniːsɪs/] used with preceding letter or numeral to designate a star in this constellation: the star Delta Phoenicis.
– ORIGIN Latin.

Phoenix[2] /ˈfiːnɪks/ the state capital of Arizona; pop. 983,400 (1990). Its dry climate makes it a popular winter resort.

phoenix ▶ noun (in classical mythology) a unique bird that lived for five or six centuries in the Arabian desert, after this time burning itself on a funeral pyre and rising from the ashes with renewed youth to live through another cycle.

■a person or thing regarded as uniquely remarkable in some respect.
– PHRASES rise like a phoenix from the ashes emerge renewed after apparent disaster or destruction.
– ORIGIN from Old French fenix, via Latin from Greek phoinix 'Phoenician, reddish purple, or phoenix'. The relationship between the Greek senses is obscure: it could not be 'the Phoenician bird' because the legend centres on the temple at Heliopolis in Egypt, where the phoenix is said to have burnt itself on the altar. Perhaps the basic sense is 'purple', symbolic of fire and possibly the primary sense of Phoenicia as the purple land (or land of the sunrise).

Phoenix Islands a group of eight islands lying just south of the equator in the western Pacific. They form a part of Kiribati.

Pholidota /ˌfɒlɪˈdəʊtə/ Zoology a small order of mammals that comprises the pangolins.
– ORIGIN modern Latin (plural), from Greek pholidōtos 'scaly', from pholis, pholid- 'scale'.

phon /fɒn/ ▶ noun a unit of the perceived loudness of sounds.
– ORIGIN 1930s: from Greek phōnē 'sound'.

phonaesthesia /ˌfəʊnəsˈθiːzɪə/ (US also phonesthesia) ▶ noun [mass noun] attribution of common elements of meaning or connotation to certain sound sequences, especially consonant clusters, for example initial sl-, as in slow, sleep, slush, slide, slip.
– ORIGIN mid 20th cent.: modern Latin, from Greek phōnē 'sound' + aesthesthai 'perceive'.

phonaesthetics /ˌfəʊnəsˈθɛtɪks/ (US also phonesthetics) ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the study of the aesthetic properties of speech sound, in particular the study of sound sequences, as in phonaesthesia.
– DERIVATIVES phonaesthetic adjective.

phonation /fə(ʊ)ˈneɪʃ(ə)n/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Phonetics the production or utterance of speech sounds.
– DERIVATIVES phonate /fə(ʊ)ˈneɪt/ verb, phonatory /ˈfəʊnət(ə)ri/ adjective.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from Greek phōnē 'sound, voice' + -ATION.

phone[1] ▶ noun short for TELEPHONE.
■(phones) informal headphones or earphones.
▶ verb short for TELEPHONE.

phone[2] ▶ noun Phonetics a speech sound; the smallest discrete segment of sound in a stream of speech.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from Greek phōnē 'sound, voice'.

-phone ▶ combining form 1 denoting an instrument using or connected with sound: megaphone.
2 denoting a person who uses a specified language: francophone.
– ORIGIN from Greek phōnē 'sound, voice'.

phone bank ▶ noun US a battery of telephones.

phone book ▶ noun a telephone directory.

phonecard ▶ noun a prepaid card which allows the user to make telephone calls up to a specified number of units using a cardphone.

phone-in ▶ noun a radio or television programme during which the listeners or viewers telephone the studio and participate.
■[as modifier] denoting something conducted by people leaving answers or messages by telephone: a phone-in contest | a phone-in poll.

phonematic /ˌfəʊnɪˈmatɪk, ˌfɒn-/ ▶ adjective (in prosodic analysis) denoting a segmental element of vowel or consonant features which combines with other elements such as intonation or stress.
– ORIGIN 1930s: from Greek phōnēma, phōnēmatik- 'relating to a sound'.

phoneme /ˈfəʊniːm/ ▶ noun Phonetics any of the perceptually distinct units of sound in a specified language that distinguish one word from another, for example p, b, d, and t in the English words pad, pat, bad, and bat. Compare with ALLOPHONE.
– DERIVATIVES phonemic /-ˈniːmɪk/ adjective, phonemics noun.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from French phonème, from Greek phōnēma 'sound, speech', from phōnein 'speak'.

phone sex ▶ noun [mass noun] a commercial service providing its customers with sexually explicit telephone conversation for the purposes of sexual gratification.

phonetic /fəˈnɛtɪk/ ▶ adjective Phonetics of or relating to speech sounds: detailed phonetic information.
■(of a system of writing) having a direct correspondence between symbols and sounds: a phonetic alphabet. ■of or relating to phonetics: phonetic training.
– DERIVATIVES phonetically adverb, phoneticism noun, phoneticist noun, phoneticize (also -ise) verb.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from modern Latin phoneticus, from Greek phōnētikos, from phōnein 'speak'.

phonetics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the study and classification of speech sounds.
– DERIVATIVES phonetician noun.

phoney (also phony) informal ▶ adjective (phonier, phoniest) not genuine; fraudulent: I thought your accent was a bit phoney.
▶ noun (pl. -eys or -ies) a fraudulent person or thing.
– DERIVATIVES phonily adverb, phoniness noun.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: of unknown origin.

phoney war the period of comparative inaction at the beginning of the Second World War between the German invasion of Poland (September 1939) and that of Norway (April 1940).

phonic /ˈfəʊnɪk, ˈfɒnɪk/ ▶ adjective of or relating to speech sounds.
■of or relating to phonics: the English language presents difficulties if a purely phonic approach is attempted.
– DERIVATIVES phonically adverb.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from Greek phōnē 'voice' + -IC.

phonics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] a method of teaching people to read by correlating sounds with symbols in an alphabetic writing system.

phono ▶ adjective [usu. attrib.] denoting a type of plug, and the corresponding socket, used with audio and video equipment, in which one conductor is cylindrical and the other is a central prong that extends beyond it.
– ORIGIN 1940s: abbreviation of PHONOGRAPH.

phono- /ˈfəʊnəʊ, ˈfɒn-/ ▶ combining form relating to sound: phonograph.
– ORIGIN from Greek phōnē 'sound, voice'.

phonocardiogram ▶ noun Medicine a chart or record of the sounds made by the heart.

phonograph ▶ noun Brit. an early form of gramophone using cylinders and able to record as well as reproduce sound.
■N. Amer. a record player.
– DERIVATIVES phonographic adjective.

phonograph record ▶ noun N. Amer. fuller form of RECORD (in sense 4).

phonolite /ˈfəʊnəlʌɪt/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Geology a fine-grained volcanic igneous rock composed of alkali feldspars and nepheline.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from PHONO- 'relating to sound' (because of its resonance when struck) + -ITE[1].

phonology /fəˈnɒlədʒi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the system of contrastive relationships among the speech sounds that constitute the fundamental components of a language.
■the study of these relationships within a language or between different languages.
– DERIVATIVES phonological adjective, phonologically adverb, phonologist noun.

phonon /ˈfəʊnɒn/ ▶ noun Physics a quantum of energy or a quasiparticle associated with a compressional wave such as sound or a vibration of a crystal lattice.
– ORIGIN 1930s: from Greek phōnē 'sound', on the pattern of photon.

phonotactics /ˌfəʊnə(ʊ)ˈtaktɪks/ ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the study of the rules governing the possible phoneme sequences in a language.
– DERIVATIVES phonotactic adjective.

phony ▶ adjective & noun variant spelling of PHONEY.

phooey informal ▶ exclamation (US also pfui) used to express disdain or disbelief: so phooey to sophistication.
▶ noun [mass noun] nonsense: they dismiss it all as movie phooey.
– ORIGIN 1920s: imitative.

phorbol /ˈfɔːbɒl/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a compound present (in the form of highly carcinogenic esters) in croton oil.
● A tetracyclic alcohol; chem. formula: $C_{20}H_{28}O_6$.
– ORIGIN 1930s: from Greek phorbē 'fodder' (from pherbein 'to feed') + -OL.

-phore ▶ combining form denoting an agent or bearer of a specified thing: ionophore | semaphore.
– DERIVATIVES -phorous combining form in corresponding adjectives.
– ORIGIN from modern Latin -phorus, from Greek -phoros, -phoron 'bearing, bearer', from pherein 'to bear'.

phoresy /fəˈriːsi, ˈfɒrəsi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Zoology an association between two organisms in which one (e.g. a mite) travels on the body of another, without being a parasite.
– DERIVATIVES phoretic /fəˈrɛtɪk/ adjective.
– ORIGIN 1920s: from French phorésie, from Greek phorēsis 'being carried'.

phormium /ˈfɔːmɪəm/ ▶ noun the flax-lily of New Zealand.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: modern Latin, from Greek phormion 'small basket' (with reference to the use made of the fibres).

Phoronida /fəˈrɒnɪdə/ Zoology a small phylum of worm-like invertebrates that comprises the horseshoe worms.
– DERIVATIVES phoronid noun.
– ORIGIN modern Latin (plural), from Latin Phoronis, Phoronid-, the name of a character in Greek mythology.

phosgene /ˈfɒzdʒiːn/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a colourless poisonous gas made by the reaction of chlorine and carbon dioxide. It was used as a poison gas, notably in the First World War.
● Alternative name: carbonyl chloride; chem. formula: $COCl_2$.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from Greek phōs 'light' + -GEN, with reference to its original production by the action of sunlight on chlorine and carbon monoxide.

phosphatase /ˈfɒsfəteɪz/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry an enzyme that catalyses the hydrolysis of organic phosphates in a specified (acid or alkaline) environment.

phosphate /ˈfɒsfeɪt/ ▶ noun Chemistry a salt or ester of phosphoric acid, containing PO_4^{3-} or a related anion or a group such as $—OPO(OH)_2$.
– ORIGIN late 18th cent.: from French, from phosphore 'phosphorus'.

phosphatic /fɒsˈfatɪk/ ▶ adjective (chiefly of rocks and fertilizer) containing or consisting of phosphates.

phosphatide /ˈfɒsfətʌɪd/ ▶ noun Biochemistry any of a class of compounds which are fatty acid esters of glycerol phosphate with a nitrogen base linked to the phosphate group.

phosphatidylcholine /ˌfɒsˌfatɪdʌɪlˈkəʊliːn, -dɪl-/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry a substance widely distributed in animal tissues, egg yolk, and some higher plants, consisting of phospholipids linked to choline.

phosphene /ˈfɒsfiːn/ ▶ noun a ring or spot of light produced by pressure on the eyeball or direct stimulation of the visual system other than by light.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: formed irregularly from Greek phōs 'light' + phainein 'to show'.

phosphide /ˈfɒsfʌɪd/ ▶ noun Chemistry a binary compound of phosphorus with another element or group.

phosphine /ˈfɒsfiːn/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a colourless foul-smelling gaseous compound of phosphorus and hydrogen, analogous to ammonia.
● Chem. formula: PH_3. It forms salts containing the phosphonium ion, PH_4^+.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from PHOSPHO- 'relating to phosphorus' + -INE[4], on the pattern of amine.

phosphite /ˈfɒsfʌɪt/ ▶ noun Chemistry old-fashioned term for phosphonate (see PHOSPHONIC ACID).

phospho- ▶ combining form representing PHOSPHORUS.

phosphocreatine /ˌfɒsfə(ʊ)ˈkriːətiːn/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry a phosphate ester of creatine found in vertebrate muscle, where it serves to store phosphates to provide energy for muscular contraction.

phosphodiesterase /ˌfɒsfə(ʊ)dʌɪˈɛstəreɪz/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry an enzyme which breaks a phosphodiester bond in an oligonucleotide.

phosphodiester bond /ˌfɒsfə(ʊ)dʌɪˈɛstə/ ▶ noun

Biochemistry a chemical bond of the kind joining successive sugar molecules in a polynucleotide.

phospholipase /ˌfɒsfə(ʊ)'lɪpeɪz, -'laɪpeɪz/ ▶ noun Biochemistry an enzyme which hydrolyses phosphatidylcholine or a similar phospholipid.

phospholipid /ˌfɒsfə(ʊ)'lɪpɪd/ ▶ noun Biochemistry a lipid containing a phosphate group in its molecule, e.g. phosphatidylcholine.

phosphonic acid /fɒs'fɒnɪk/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a crystalline acid obtained by the reaction of phosphorus trioxide with water.
• A dibasic acid, chem. formula: $HPO(OH)_2$.
– DERIVATIVES phosphonate noun.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: phosphonic from PHOSPHO- 'relating to phosphorus', on the pattern of sulphonic.

phosphonium /fɒs'fəʊnɪəm/ ▶ noun see PHOSPHINE.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: blend of PHOSPHORUS and AMMONIUM.

phosphoprotein ▶ noun Biochemistry a protein that contains phosphorus (other than in a nucleic acid or a phospholipid).

phosphor /'fɒsfə/ ▶ noun a synthetic fluorescent or phosphorescent substance, especially any of those used to coat the screens of cathode ray tubes.
■ old-fashioned term for PHOSPHORUS.
– ORIGIN early 17th cent.: from Latin phosphorus (see PHOSPHORUS).

phosphorated ▶ adjective combined or impregnated with phosphorus.

phosphor bronze ▶ noun [mass noun] a tough, hard form of bronze containing a small amount of phosphorus, used especially for bearings.

phosphoresce /ˌfɒsfə'rɛs/ ▶ verb [no obj.] emit light or radiation by phosphorescence.

phosphorescence ▶ noun [mass noun] light emitted by a substance without combustion or perceptible heat: the stones overhead gleamed with phosphorescence.
■ Physics the emission of radiation in a similar manner to fluorescence but on a longer timescale, so that emission continues after excitation ceases.
– DERIVATIVES phosphorescent adjective.

phosphoric /fɒs'fɒrɪk/ ▶ adjective relating to or containing phosphorus.
■ Chemistry of phosphorus with a valency of five. Compare with PHOSPHOROUS.
– ORIGIN late 18th cent.: from French phosphorique, from phosphore 'phosphorus'.

phosphoric acid ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a crystalline acid obtained e.g. by treating phosphates with sulphuric acid, and used in fertilizer and soap manufacture and food processing.
• A tribasic acid; chem. formula: H_3PO_4.

phosphorite /'fɒsfərʌɪt/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a sedimentary rock containing a high proportion of calcium phosphate.
– ORIGIN late 18th cent.: from PHOSPHORUS + -ITE[1].

phosphorous /'fɒsf(ə)rəs/ ▶ adjective relating to or containing phosphorus. Compare with PHOSPHORIC.
■ Chemistry of phosphorus with a valency of three.
■ phosphorescent.

USAGE The correct spelling for the noun denoting the chemical element is phosphorus, while the correct spelling for the adjective meaning 'relating to or containing phosphorus' is phosphorous. A common mistake is to use the spelling phosphorous for the noun as well as the adjective. Approximately 6 per cent of citations for this word in the British National Corpus use this incorrect spelling.

phosphorous acid ▶ noun another term for PHOSPHONIC ACID.

phosphorus /'fɒsf(ə)rəs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the chemical element of atomic number 15, a poisonous, combustible non-metal which exists in two common allotropic forms, white phosphorus, a yellowish waxy solid which ignites spontaneously in air and glows in the dark, and red phosphorus, a less reactive form used in making matches. (Symbol: P) – ORIGIN late 17th cent.: from Latin, from Greek phōsphoros, from phōs 'light' + -phoros '-bringing'.

phosphoryl /'fɒsfərʌɪl, -rɪl/ ▶ noun [as modifier] Chemistry the trivalent group ≡PO.
■ Biochemistry the monovalent phosphate group $—PO(OH)_2$.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from PHOSPHORUS + -YL.

phosphorylase /fɒs'fɒrɪleɪz/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry an enzyme which introduces a phosphate group into an organic molecule, notably glucose.

phosphorylate /fɒs'fɒrɪleɪt/ ▶ verb [with obj.] (often be phosphorylated) chiefly Biochemistry introduce a phosphate group into (a molecule or compound).
– DERIVATIVES phosphorylation noun.

phossy jaw /'fɒsi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] historical, informal gangrene of the jawbone caused by phosphorus poisoning.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: phossy by abbreviation of phosphorus necrosis, denoting gangrene of the jaw.

phot /fəʊt/ ▶ noun a unit of illumination equal to one lumen per square centimetre.
– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: from Greek phōs, phōt- 'light'.

photic ▶ adjective technical of or relating to light, especially as an agent of chemical change or physiological response.
■ Ecology denoting the layers of the ocean reached by sufficient sunlight to allow plant growth: an average depth for the photic zone is about 100 m.

photino /fə(ʊ)'ti:nəʊ/ ▶ noun (pl. -os) Physics the hypothetical supersymmetric counterpart of the photon, with spin −½.
– ORIGIN 1970s: from PHOTON + -ino from NEUTRINO.

Photius /'fəʊtɪəs/ (*c.*820–*c.*891), Byzantine scholar and patriarch of Constantinople. His most important work is the Bibliotheca, a critical account of 280 earlier prose works and an invaluable source of information about many works now lost.

■ informal a photo finish.
▶ verb (-oes, -oed) [with obj.] informal take a photograph of.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: abbreviation.

2 relating to photography: photofit.
– ORIGIN sense 1 from Greek phōs, phōt- 'light'; sense 2, abbreviation of PHOTOGRAPHY.

photoactive ▶ adjective (of a substance) capable of a chemical or physical change in response to illumination.

photobiology ▶ noun [mass noun] the study of the effects of light on living organisms.

photobleaching ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry loss of colour by a pigment (such as chlorophyll or rhodopsin) when illuminated.

photocall ▶ noun Brit. an occasion on which famous people pose for photographers by arrangement.

photocatalysis /ˌfəʊtə(ʊ)kə'talɪsɪs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry the acceleration of a chemical reaction by light.
– DERIVATIVES photocatalytic adjective.

photocathode ▶ noun a cathode which emits electrons when illuminated, causing an electric current.

photo CD ▶ noun a compact disc from which still photographs can be displayed on a television screen.
■ [mass noun] the storing and reproducing of photographs in this way: photo CD is used in medicine and data storage

photocell ▶ noun short for PHOTOELECTRIC CELL.

photochemical ▶ adjective of, relating to, or caused by the chemical action of light: photochemical smog.
■ of or relating to photochemistry.
– DERIVATIVES photochemically adverb.

photochemistry ▶ noun [mass noun] the branch of chemistry concerned with the chemical effects of light.

photochromic ▶ adjective (of a substance) undergoing a reversible change in colour or shade when exposed to light of a particular frequency or intensity: photochromic sunglasses.
– DERIVATIVES photochromism noun.
– ORIGIN 1950s: from PHOTO- 'relating to light' + Greek khrōma 'colour' + -IC.

photocoagulation /ˌfəʊtə(ʊ)kəʊˌagjʊ'leɪʃ(ə)n/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine the use of a laser beam or other intense light source to coagulate and destroy or fuse small areas of tissue, especially in the retina.

photocomposition ▶ noun another term for FILMSETTING.

photoconductivity /ˌfəʊtə(ʊ)kɒndʌk'tɪvɪti/ ▶ noun [mass noun] increased electrical conductivity caused by the presence of light.
– DERIVATIVES photoconductive adjective, photoconductor noun.

photocopier ▶ noun a machine for making photocopies.

photocopy ▶ noun (pl. -ies) a photographic copy of printed or written material produced by a process involving the action of light on a specially prepared surface.
▶ verb (-ies, -ied) [with obj.] make a photocopy of.
– DERIVATIVES photocopiable adjective.

photocurrent ▶ noun an electric current induced by the action of light.

photodegradable ▶ adjective capable of being decomposed by the action of light, especially sunlight: photodegradable plastic.

photodetector ▶ noun a device that detects or responds to incident light by using the electrical effect of individual photons.

photodiode ▶ noun a semiconductor diode which, when exposed to light, generates a potential difference or changes its electrical resistance.

photodissociation ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry dissociation of a chemical compound by the action of light.

photodynamic ▶ adjective Medicine denoting treatment for cancer involving the injection of a cytotoxic compound which is relatively inactive until activated by a laser beam after collecting in the tumour.

photoelectric ▶ adjective characterized by or involving the emission of electrons from a surface by the action of light.
– DERIVATIVES photoelectricity noun.

photoelectric cell ▶ noun a device using a photoelectric effect to generate current.

photoelectron ▶ noun an electron emitted from an atom by interaction with a photon, especially an electron emitted from a solid surface by the action of light.
– DERIVATIVES photoelectronic adjective.

photoemission ▶ noun [mass noun] the emission of electrons from a surface caused by the action of light striking it.
– DERIVATIVES photoemitter noun.

photoessay ▶ noun an essay or short article consisting of text matter and numerous photographs.

photo finish ▶ noun a close finish of a race in which the winner is identifiable only from a photograph taken as the competitors cross the line.

photofit ▶ noun Brit. a reconstructed picture of a person, especially one sought by the police, made from composite photographs of facial features.

photog /fə'tɒg/ ▶ noun N. Amer. informal a photographer.

photogenic /ˌfəʊtə(ʊ)'dʒɛnɪk, -'dʒi:n-/ ▶ adjective 1 (especially of a person) looking attractive in photographs or on film: a photogenic child.
2 Biology (of an organism or tissue) producing or emitting light.
– DERIVATIVES photogenically adverb.

photogeology ▶ noun [mass noun] the field of study concerned with the geological interpretation of aerial photographs.
– DERIVATIVES photogeological adjective, photogeologist noun.

photogram ▶ noun a picture produced with photographic materials, such as light-sensitive paper, but without a camera.
■ archaic a photograph.

photogrammetry /ˌfəʊtə(ʊ)'gramɪtri/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the use of photography in surveying and mapping to ascertain measurements between objects.
– DERIVATIVES photogrammetric adjective, photogrammetrist noun.

photograph ▶ noun a picture made using a camera, in which an image is focused on to film or other light-sensitive material and then made visible and permanent by chemical treatment.

Modern photography is based on the property of silver compounds of decomposing to metallic silver when exposed to light. The light-sensitive salts are held in an emulsion (in colour film, layers of emulsion) usually mounted on transparent roll film.

▶ verb [with obj.] take a photograph of.
■ [no obj., with adverbial] appear in a particular way when in a photograph: that cityscape photographs well.
– DERIVATIVES photographable adjective, photographer noun, photographic adjective, photographically adverb.

photographic memory ▶ noun the ability to remember information or visual images in great detail.

photography ▶ noun [mass noun] the art or practice of taking and processing photographs.

photogravure /ˌfəʊtə(ʊ)grəˈvjʊə/ ▶ noun an image produced from a photographic negative transferred to a metal plate and etched in.
■ [mass noun] the production of images in this way.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from French, from photo- 'relating to light' + gravure 'engraving'.

photoionization /ˌfəʊtəʊˌʌɪənʌɪˈzeɪʃ(ə)n/ (also -isation) ▶ noun [mass noun] Physics ionization produced in a medium by the action of electromagnetic radiation.

photojournalism ▶ noun [mass noun] the art or practice of communicating news by photographs, especially in magazines.
– DERIVATIVES photojournalist noun.

photolithography (also photolitho) ▶ noun [mass noun] lithography using plates made photographically.
– DERIVATIVES photolithographic adjective, photolithographically adverb.

photolysis /fəˈ(ʊ)tɒlɪsɪs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry the decomposition or separation of molecules by the action of light.
– DERIVATIVES photolyse verb, photolytic adjective.

photomap ▶ noun a map made from or drawn on photographs of the area concerned.

photomask ▶ noun Electronics a photographic pattern used in making microcircuits, ultraviolet light being shone through the mask on to a photoresist in order to transfer the pattern.

photomechanical ▶ adjective relating to or denoting processes in which photography is involved in the making of a printing plate.
– DERIVATIVES photomechanically adverb.

photometer /fəˈ(ʊ)tɒmɪtə/ ▶ noun an instrument for measuring the intensity of light.
– DERIVATIVES photometric adjective, photometrically adverb, photometry noun.

photomicrograph ▶ noun a photograph of a microscopic object, taken with the aid of a microscope.
– DERIVATIVES photomicrographer noun, photomicrography noun.

photomontage /ˌfəʊtəʊmɒnˈtɑːʒ/ ▶ noun a montage constructed from photographic images.
■ [mass noun] the technique of constructing such a montage.

photomorphogenesis /ˌfəʊtə(ʊ)mɔːfəˈdʒɛnɪsɪs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Botany development of form and structure in plants which is affected by light, other than that occurring for photosynthesis.

photomosaic ▶ noun a large-scale detailed picture or map built up by combining photographs of small areas.

photomultiplier ▶ noun an instrument containing a photoelectric cell and a series of electrodes, used to detect and amplify the light from very faint sources.

photon /ˈfəʊtɒn/ ▶ noun Physics a particle representing a quantum of light or other electromagnetic radiation. A photon carries energy proportional to the radiation frequency but has zero rest mass.
– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: from Greek phōs, phōt- 'light', on the pattern of electron.

photonegative ▶ adjective 1 Biology (of an organism) tending to move away from light.
2 Physics (of a substance) exhibiting a decrease in electrical conductivity under illumination.

photonics /fəʊˈtɒnɪks/ ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the branch of technology concerned with the properties and transmission of photons, for example in fibre optics.

photo-offset ▶ noun [mass noun] offset printing using plates made photographically.

photoperiod ▶ noun Botany & Zoology the period of time each day during which an organism receives illumination; day length.
– DERIVATIVES photoperiodic adjective.

photoperiodism ▶ noun [mass noun] Botany & Zoology the response of an organism to seasonal changes in day length.

photophobia ▶ noun [mass noun] extreme sensitivity to light.
– DERIVATIVES photophobic adjective.

photophore /ˈfəʊtə(ʊ)fɔː/ ▶ noun Zoology a light-producing organ in certain fishes and other animals.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from Greek phōtophoros 'light-bearing'.

photopic /fəʊˈtɒpɪk, fəʊˈtəʊpɪk/ ▶ adjective Physiology relating to or denoting vision in daylight or other bright light, believed to involve chiefly the cones of the retina. Often contrasted with SCOTOPIC.
– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: from PHOTO- 'light' + -OPIA + -IC.

photopigment ▶ noun a pigment whose chemical state depends on its degree of illumination, such as those in the retina of the eye.

photopolarimeter /ˌfəʊtəʊpəʊləˈrɪmɪtə/ ▶ noun a telescopic apparatus for photographing stars, galaxies, etc. and measuring the polarization of light from them.

photopolymer ▶ noun a light-sensitive polymeric material, especially one used in printing plates or microfilms.

photopositive ▶ adjective 1 Biology (of an organism) tending to move towards light.
2 Physics (of a substance) exhibiting an increase in electrical conductivity under illumination.

photoproduct ▶ noun a product of a photochemical reaction.

photoprotein ▶ noun Biochemistry a protein active in the emission of light by a living creature.

photorealism ▶ noun [mass noun] 1 detailed and unidealized representation in art, especially of banal, mundane, or sordid aspects of life.
2 detailed visual representation, like that obtained in a photograph, in a non-photographic medium such as animation or computer graphics.
– DERIVATIVES photorealist noun & adjective, photorealistic adjective.

photoreceptor ▶ noun a structure in a living organism, especially a sensory cell or sense organ, that responds to light falling on it.
– DERIVATIVES photoreceptive adjective.

photoreconnaissance ▶ noun [mass noun] military reconnaissance carried out by means of aerial photography.

photoresist ▶ noun a photosensitive resist which, when exposed to light, loses its resistance or its susceptibility to attack by an etchant or solvent. Such materials are used in making microcircuits.

photorespiration ▶ noun [mass noun] Botany a respiratory process in many higher plants by which they take up oxygen in the light and give out some carbon dioxide, contrary to the general pattern of photosynthesis.

photoresponse ▶ noun Biology a response of a plant or other organism to light, mediated otherwise than through photosynthesis.

photosensitive ▶ adjective having a chemical, electrical, or other response to light: photosensitive cells | photosensitive drugs.
– DERIVATIVES photosensitivity noun.

photo session ▶ noun a pre-arranged session in which a photographer takes photographs of someone for publication.

photosetter ▶ noun a machine for filmsetting.

photosetting ▶ noun another term for FILMSETTING.
– DERIVATIVES photoset verb (past and past participle -set)

photosphere ▶ noun Astronomy the luminous envelope of a star from which its light and heat radiate.

photostat /ˈfəʊtə(ʊ)stat/ ▶ noun trademark a type of machine for making photocopies on special paper.
■ a copy made by this means.
▶ verb (photostatted, photostatting) [with obj.] make a copy of (a document) using a photostat machine.
– DERIVATIVES photostatic adjective.

photostory ▶ noun a strip cartoon with photographs in place of drawings.

photosynthate /ˌfəʊtəʊˈsɪnθeɪt/ ▶ noun Biochemistry a sugar or other substance made by photosynthesis.

photosynthesis ▶ noun [mass noun] the process by which green plants and some other organisms use sunlight to synthesize foods from carbon dioxide and water. Photosynthesis in plants generally involves the green pigment chlorophyll and generates oxygen as a by-product.
– DERIVATIVES photosynthetic adjective, photosynthetically adverb.

photosynthesize (also -ise) ▶ verb [no obj.] (of a plant) synthesize sugars or other substances by means of photosynthesis.

photosystem ▶ noun a biochemical mechanism in plants by which chlorophyll absorbs light energy for photosynthesis. There are two such mechanisms (photosystems I and II) involving different chlorophyll–protein complexes.

phototaxis /ˌfəʊtəʊˈtaksɪs/ ▶ noun (pl. phototaxes) [mass noun] Biology the bodily movement of a motile organism in response to light, either towards the source of light (positive phototaxis) or away from it (negative phototaxis). Compare with PHOTOTROPISM.
■ [count noun] a movement of this kind.
– DERIVATIVES phototactic adjective.

phototherapy ▶ noun [mass noun] the use of light in the treatment of physical or mental illness.

phototransistor ▶ noun a transistor that responds to light striking it by generating and amplifying an electric current.

phototroph /ˈfəʊtə(ʊ)trəʊf/ ▶ noun Biology a phototrophic organism.

phototrophic ▶ adjective Biology (of an organism) obtaining energy from sunlight to synthesize organic compounds for nutrition.

phototropism /ˌfəʊtə(ʊ)ˈtrəʊpɪz(ə)m, fəʊˈtɒtrəˌpɪz(ə)m/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biology the orientation of a plant or other organism in response to light, either towards the source of light (positive phototropism) or away from it (negative phototropism). Compare with HELIOTROPISM, PHOTOTAXIS.
– DERIVATIVES phototropic adjective.

phototube ▶ noun Electronics a photocell in the form of an electron tube with a photoemissive cathode.

phototypesetter ▶ noun a machine for filmsetting.
– DERIVATIVES phototypeset adjective, phototypesetting noun.

photovoltaic /ˌfəʊtəʊvɒlˈteɪɪk/ ▶ adjective relating to the production of electric current at the junction of two substances exposed to light.

photovoltaics ▶ plural noun [treated as sing.] the branch of technology concerned with the production of electric current at the junction of two substances.
■ [treated as pl.] devices having such a junction.

phragmites /fragˈmʌɪtiːz/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a common and invasive tall reed.
● Genus Phragmites, family Gramineae: several species, in particular the common or Norfolk reed.

phyto- ▶ combining form of a plant; relating to plants: phytogeography.
– ORIGIN from Greek phuton 'a plant', from phuein 'come into being'.

phytoalexin /ˌfʌɪtəʊə'lɛksɪn/ ▶ noun Botany a substance that is produced by plant tissues in response to contact with a parasite and specifically inhibits the growth of that parasite.
– ORIGIN 1940s: from PHYTO- 'of plants' + alexin, a name for a class of substances found in blood serum, able to destroy bacteria.

phytochemistry ▶ noun [mass noun] the branch of chemistry concerned with plants and plant products.
– DERIVATIVES phytochemical adjective, phytochemist noun.

phytochrome ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry a blue-green pigment found in many plants, in which it regulates various developmental processes.
– ORIGIN late 19th cent.: from PHYTO- 'relating to plants' + Greek khrōma 'colour'.

phytogenetic ▶ adjective Botany of or relating to the origin and evolution of plants.

phytogeographical kingdom ▶ noun Botany each of a number of major areas of the earth distinguished on the basis of the characteristic plants present. They usually include the Boreal, Palaeotropical, Neotropical, Australian, and Antarctic kingdoms. Also called FLORAL KINGDOM.

phytogeography ▶ noun [mass noun] the branch of botany that deals with the geographical distribution of plants. Also called PLANT GEOGRAPHY.
– DERIVATIVES phytogeographer noun, phytogeographic adjective, phytogeographical adjective, phytogeographically adverb.

phytohaemagglutinin /ˌfʌɪtə(ʊ)hi:məˈglu:tɪnɪn/ (US phytohemagglutinin) ▶ noun [mass noun] Biochemistry a plant protein, especially that extracted from the French bean, that causes red blood cells to clump together.

phytolith /'fʌɪtə(ʊ)lɪθ/ ▶ noun Botany a minute mineral particle formed inside a plant.
■Palaeontology a fossilized particle of plant tissue.

phytopathology ▶ noun [mass noun] the study of plant diseases.
– DERIVATIVES phytopathological adjective, phytopathologist noun.

phytophagous /fʌɪ'tɒfəgəs/ ▶ adjective Zoology (especially of an insect or other invertebrate) feeding on plants.
– DERIVATIVES phytophagy noun.

phytoplankton /'fʌɪtəʊˌplaŋktən/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Biology plankton consisting of microscopic plants.

phytosanitary ▶ adjective relating to the health of plants, especially with respect to the requirements of international trade.
■denoting a certificate stating that plants are free from infectious diseases.

phytotoxic ▶ adjective Botany poisonous to plants.
– DERIVATIVES phytotoxicity noun.

phytotoxin ▶ noun Botany a poisonous substance derived from a plant.
■a substance that is phytotoxic, especially one produced by a parasite.

pi[1] /pʌɪ/ ▶ noun the sixteenth letter of the Greek alphabet (Π, π), transliterated as 'p'.
■ the numerical value of the ratio of the circumference of a circle to its diameter (approximately 3.14159). [ORIGIN: from the initial letter of Greek periphereia 'circumference'.] ■ (Pi) [followed by Latin genitive] Astronomy the sixteenth star in a constellation: Pi Herculis. ■ Chemistry & Physics relating to or denoting an electron or orbital with one unit of angular momentum about an internuclear axis.
▶ symbol for ■ (π) the numerical value of pi. ■ (Π) osmotic pressure. ■ (Π) mathematical product.
– ORIGIN Greek.

pi[2] /pʌɪ/ ▶ adjective Brit. informal short for PIOUS.

pia /ˈpʌɪə, ˈpiːə/ (in full pia mater) ▶ noun [mass noun] Anatomy the delicate innermost membrane enveloping the brain and spinal cord. See also MENINGES.

poised ▶ adjective having a composed and self-assured manner.
■ having a graceful and elegant bearing.

Poiseuille flow /pwaˈzəːi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Physics laminar or streamline flow of an incompressible viscous fluid, especially through a long narrow cylinder.
– ORIGIN 1940s: named after Jean L. M. Poiseuille (1799–1869), French physician.

poisha /ˈpɔɪʃə/ ▶ noun (pl. same) a monetary unit of Bangladesh, equal to one hundredth of a taka.
– ORIGIN Bengali, alteration of PAISA.

poison ▶ noun [mass noun] a substance that when introduced into or absorbed by a living organism causes death or injury, especially one that kills by rapid action even in a small quantity.
■ Chemistry a substance that reduces the activity of a catalyst. ■ Physics an additive or impurity in a nuclear reactor that slows a reaction by absorbing neutrons. ■ a person, idea, action, or situation that is considered to have a destructive or corrupting effect or influence: the late 1930s, when Nazism was spreading its poison.
▶ verb [with obj.] administer poison to (a person or animal), either deliberately or accidentally: he tried to poison his wife | [as noun poisoning] symptoms of poisoning may include nausea, diarrhoea, and vomiting.
■ adulterate or contaminate (food or drink) with poison. ■ [usu. as adj. poisoned] treat (a weapon or missile) with poison in order to augment its lethal effect. ■ (of a dangerous substance) kill or cause to become very ill: swans are being poisoned by lead from anglers' lines. ■ contaminate or pollute (an area, the air, or water). ■ figurative prove harmful or destructive to: his disgust had poisoned his attitude toward everyone. ■ Chemistry (of a substance) reduce the activity of (a catalyst).
– PHRASES what's your poison? informal used to ask someone what they would like to drink.
– DERIVATIVES poisoner noun.
– ORIGIN Middle English (denoting a harmful medicinal draught): from Old French poison 'magic potion', from Latin potio(n-) 'potion', related to potare 'to drink'.

poison-arrow frog ▶ noun a small slender tropical American frog which is typically brightly coloured. The skin of these frogs secretes a virulent poison, which is used by American Indians to coat their arrows.
● Family Dendrobatidae: several genera and numerous species.

poisoned chalice ▶ noun an assignment, award, or honour which is likely to prove a disadvantage or source of problems to the recipient: many thought the new minister had been handed a poisoned chalice.

poison gas ▶ noun [mass noun] poisonous gas or vapour, used especially to disable an enemy in warfare.

poison ivy ▶ noun a North American climbing plant which secretes an irritant oil from its leaves that can cause dermatitis.
● Rhus radicans, family Anacardiaceae.

poison oak ▶ noun a North American climbing shrub related to poison ivy and having similar properties.
● Rhus toxicodendron, family Anacardiaceae.

poisonous ▶ adjective (of an animal or insect) producing poison as a means of attacking enemies or prey: a poisonous snake.
■ (of a plant or substance) causing or capable of causing death or illness if taken into the body: poisonous chemicals. ■ figurative extremely unpleasant or malicious: there was a poisonous atmosphere at the office.
– DERIVATIVES poisonously adverb.

poison pen letter ▶ noun an anonymous letter that is libellous, abusive, or malicious.

poison pill ▶ noun Finance a tactic used by a company threatened with an unwelcome takeover bid to make itself unattractive to the bidder.

Poisson /ˈpwʌsɔ̃/, Siméon-Denis (1781–1840), French mathematical physicist. His major contributions were in probability theory, in which he greatly improved Laplace's work and developed several concepts that are now named after him.

Poisson distribution /ˈpwʌsɔ̃/ ▶ noun Statistics a discrete frequency distribution which gives the probability of a number of independent events occurring in a fixed time.

Poisson's ratio ▶ noun Physics the ratio of the proportional decrease in a lateral measurement to the proportional increase in length in a sample of material that is elastically stretched.

Poitier /ˈpwʌtɪeɪ/, Sidney (b.1924), American actor and film director, the first black American actor to achieve superstar status. Notable films: Lilies of the Field (1963, for which he won an Oscar) and In the Heat of the Night (1967).

Poitiers /ˈpwʌtɪeɪ/ a city in west central France, the chief town of Poitou-Charentes region and capital of the former province of Poitou; pop. 82,500 (1990).

Poitou /ˈpwatuː/ a former province of west central France, now united with Charente to form the region of Poitou-Charentes. Formerly part of Aquitaine, it was held by the French and English in succession until it was finally united with France at the end of the Hundred Years War.

poke[3] ▶ noun 1 another term for POKEWEED.
2 (Indian poke) a North American plant of the lily family with a poisonous black rhizome and tall sprays of yellow-green flowers.
• Veratrum viride, family Liliaceae.
– ORIGIN early 18th cent.: from Algonquian poughkone (see PUCCOON).

poke-check ▶ verb [with obj.] Ice Hockey poke the puck off the stick of (an opposing player).

poker[1] ▶ noun a metal rod with a handle, used for prodding and stirring an open fire.

poker[2] ▶ noun [mass noun] a card game played by two or more people who bet on the value of the hands dealt to them. A player wins the pool either by having the highest combination at the showdown or by forcing all opponents to concede without a showing of the hand, sometimes by means of bluff.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: of US origin; perhaps related to German pochen 'to brag', Pochspiel 'bragging game'.

poker dice ▶ plural noun dice with card designs (from nine to ace) on the faces instead of spots.
■ [mass noun] a dice game in which the thrower aims for combinations of several dice similar to winning hands in poker.

poker-face ▶ noun an impassive expression that hides one's true feelings.
■ a person with such an expression.
– DERIVATIVES poker-faced adjective.

pokerwork ▶ noun British term for PYROGRAPHY.

pokeweed ▶ noun [mass noun] a North American plant with red stems, spikes of cream flowers, and purple berries. Also called POKE[3].
• Phytolacca americana, family Phytolaccaceae.
– ORIGIN early 18th cent.: poke from Algonquian poughkone.

pokey ▶ noun (usu. the pokey) informal, chiefly N. Amer. prison.
– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: alteration of POGEY (an early sense being 'hostel for the needy'), perhaps influenced by POKY.

poky (also pokey) ▶ adjective (pokier, pokiest) 1 (of a room or building) uncomfortably small and cramped: five of us shared the poky little room.
2 informal (especially of a car) having considerable power or acceleration.
3 N. Amer. annoyingly slow: his speech was poky, like he was a little simple.
– DERIVATIVES pokily adverb, pokiness noun.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent. (in the sense 'concerned with petty matters'): from POKE[1] (in a contemporaneous sense 'confine') + -Y[1].

pol ▶ noun informal, chiefly N. Amer. a politician.

Polack /ˈpəʊlak/ (also polack) derogatory, chiefly N. Amer.
▶ noun a person from Poland or of Polish descent.
▶ adjective of Polish origin or descent.
– ORIGIN late 16th cent.: from Polish Polak.

Poland a country in central Europe with a coastline on the Baltic Sea; pop. 38,183,160 (1990); official language, Polish; capital, Warsaw. Polish name POLSKA.

> First united as a nation in the 11th century, Poland became a dominant power in the region in the 16th century but thereafter suffered severely from the rise of Russian, Swedish, Prussian, and Austrian power, being partitioned in the late 18th century. Poland regained full independence (as a republic) after the First World War. Its invasion by German forces in 1939 precipitated the Second World War, from which it eventually emerged as a communist state under Soviet domination. In the 1980s the rise of the independent trade union movement Solidarity eventually led to the end of communist rule (1989).

Polanski /pəˈlanski/, Roman (b.1933), French film director, of Polish descent. His second wife, the actress Sharon Tate (1943–69), was one of the victims of a multiple murder by followers of the cult leader Charles Manson. Notable films: Rosemary's Baby (1968) and Chinatown (1974).

polar ▶ adjective 1 of or relating to the North or South Pole: the polar regions.
■ (of an animal or plant) living in the north or south polar region. ■ Astronomy of or relating to the poles of a celestial body. ■ Astronomy of or relating to a celestial pole. ■ Geometry of or relating to the poles of a sphere. See POLE[2]. ■ Biology of or relating to the poles of a cell, organ, or part.
2 Physics & Chemistry having electrical or magnetic polarity.
■ (of a liquid, especially a solvent) consisting of molecules with a dipole moment. ■ (of a solid) ionic.
3 directly opposite in character or tendency: depression and its polar opposite, mania.
▶ noun 1 Geometry the straight line joining the two points at which tangents from a fixed point touch a conic section.
2 Astronomy a variable binary star which emits strongly polarized light, one component being a strongly magnetic white dwarf.
– ORIGIN mid 16th cent.: from medieval Latin polaris 'heavenly', from Latin polus 'end of an axis' (see POLE[2]).

polar axis ▶ noun Astronomy the axis of an equatorially mounted telescope which is at right angles to the declination axis and parallel to the earth's axis of rotation, about which the telescope is turned to follow the apparent movement of celestial objects resulting from the earth's rotation.

polar bear ▶ noun a large white arctic bear which lives mainly on the pack ice. It is a powerful swimmer and feeds chiefly on seals.
• Thalarctos maritimus, family Ursidae.

polar body ▶ noun Biology each of the small cells which bud off from an oocyte at the two meiotic divisions and do not develop into ova.

polar cap ▶ noun Astronomy a region of ice or other frozen matter surrounding a pole of a planet.

polar coordinates ▶ plural noun Geometry a pair of coordinates locating the position of a point in a plane, the first being the length of the straight line (r) connecting the point to the origin, and the second the angle (θ) made by this line with a fixed line.
■ the coordinates in a three-dimensional extension of this system.

polar curve ▶ noun Geometry a curve drawn on polar coordinates around a fixed point, as in a polar diagram.

polar diagram ▶ noun chiefly Physics & Electronics a diagram in which a point of origin is surrounded by a curve whose radius at any given point is proportional to the magnitude of some property measured in the direction of that point. Polar diagrams are often used to depict the directional sensitivity of aerials and microphones.

polar distance ▶ noun Geometry the angular distance of a point on a sphere from the nearest pole.

polarimeter /ˌpəʊləˈrɪmɪtə/ ▶ noun an instrument for measuring the polarization of light, and especially (in chemical analysis) for determining the effect of a substance in rotating the plane of polarization of light.
– DERIVATIVES polarimetric adjective, polarimetry noun.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from medieval Latin polaris 'polar' + -METER.

Polaris /pəˈlɑːrɪs/ 1 Astronomy the Pole Star.
2 a type of submarine-launched ballistic missile designed to carry nuclear warheads, formerly in service with the US and British navies.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from medieval Latin polaris 'heavenly', from Latin polus 'end of an axis'.

polariscope /pəˈlarɪskəʊp/ ▶ noun another term for POLARIMETER.
– DERIVATIVES polariscopic adjective.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from medieval Latin polaris 'polar' + -SCOPE.

polarity ▶ noun (pl. -ies) [mass noun] the property of having poles or being polar: it exhibits polarity when presented to a magnetic needle.
■ the relative orientation of poles; the direction of a magnetic or electric field: the magnetic field peaks in strength immediately after switching polarity. ■ the state of having two opposite or contradictory tendencies, opinions, or aspects: the polarity between male and female | [count noun] the cold war's neat polarities can hardly be carried on. ■ Biology the tendency of living organisms or parts to develop with distinct anterior and posterior (or uppermost and lowermost) ends, or to grow or orientate in a particular direction.

polarity therapy ▶ noun [mass noun] a system of treatment used in alternative medicine, intended to restore a balanced distribution of the body's energy, and incorporating manipulation, exercise, and dietary restrictions.

polarize (also -ise) ▶ verb 1 [with obj.] Physics restrict the vibrations of (a transverse wave, especially light) wholly or partially to one direction: [as adj. polarizing] a polarizing microscope.
2 [with obj.] Physics cause (something) to acquire polarity: the electrode is polarized in aqueous solution.
3 divide or cause to divide into two sharply contrasting groups or sets of opinions or beliefs: [no obj.] the cultural sphere has polarized into two competing ideological positions | [with obj.] Vietnam polarized political opinion.

– DERIVATIVES polarizable adjective, polarization noun, polarizer noun.

polarizing filter ▶ noun a photographic or optical filter that polarizes the light passing through it, used chiefly for reducing reflections and improving contrast. Two polarizing filters are often used together, such that rotation of one of them results in a neutral density filter of variable density.

polarography /ˌpəʊləˈrɒgrəfi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a method of analysis in which a sample is subjected to electrolysis using a special electrode and a range of applied voltages, a plot of current against voltage showing steps corresponding to particular chemical species and proportional to their concentration.
– DERIVATIVES polarographic adjective.
– ORIGIN 1930s: from polarization (see POLARIZE) + -GRAPHY.

Polaroid ▶ noun trademark 1 [mass noun] material in thin plastic sheets that produces a high degree of plane polarization in light passing through it.
■ (Polaroids) sunglasses with lenses made from such material.
2 a photograph taken with a Polaroid camera.
▶ adjective Photography denoting a type of camera with internal processing that produces a finished print rapidly after each exposure.
■ denoting film for or a photograph taken with such a camera: a small Polaroid snapshot.
– ORIGIN 1930s: from POLARIZE + -OID.

polar orbit ▶ noun a satellite orbit that passes over polar regions, especially one whose plane contains the polar axis.

polar star ▶ noun Astronomy a star at or close to a celestial pole, especially the Pole Star.

polar wandering ▶ noun [mass noun] the slow erratic movement of the earth's poles relative to the continents throughout geological time, due largely to continental drift.

polder /ˈpəʊldə/ ▶ noun a piece of low-lying land reclaimed from the sea or a river and protected by dykes, especially in the Netherlands.
– ORIGIN early 17th cent.: from Dutch, from Middle Dutch polre.

Pole ▶ noun a native or national of Poland, or a person of Polish descent.
– ORIGIN via German from Polish Polanie, literally 'field-dwellers', from pole 'field'.

pole[1] ▶ noun 1 a long, slender, rounded piece of wood or metal, typically used with one end placed in the ground as a support for something: a tent pole.
■ Athletics a long, slender, flexible rod of wood or fibreglass used by a competitor in pole-vaulting. ■ a young tree with a straight slender trunk and no lower branches. ■ short for SKI POLE. ■ a wooden shaft fitted to the front of a cart or carriage drawn by animals and attached to their yokes or collars. ■ a simple fishing rod.
2 historical, chiefly Brit. another term for PERCH[3] (in sense 1).
■ (also square pole) another term for PERCH[3] (in sense 2).
▶ verb [with obj.] propel (a boat) by pushing a pole against the bottom of a river, canal, or lake.
– PHRASES under bare poles Sailing with no sail set. up the pole informal 1 Brit. mad: taxes can be enough to drive you up the pole. 2 chiefly Irish pregnant.
– ORIGIN late Old English pāl (in early use without reference to thickness or length), of Germanic origin; related to Dutch paal and German Pfahl, based on Latin palus 'stake'.

pole[2] ▶ noun either of the two locations (North Pole or South Pole) on the surface of the earth (or of a celestial object) which are the northern and southern ends of the axis of rotation. See also MAGNETIC POLE.
■ Geometry either of the two points at which the axis of a circle cuts the surface of a sphere. ■ Geometry a fixed point to which other points or lines are referred, e.g. the origin of polar coordinates or the point of which a line or curve is a polar. ■ Biology an extremity of the main axis of a cell, organ, or part. ■ each of the two opposite points on the surface of a magnet at which magnetic forces are strongest. ■ figurative one of two opposed or contradictory principles or ideas: Miriam and Rebecca represent two poles in the argument about transracial adoption.
– PHRASES be poles apart have nothing in common.
– DERIVATIVES poleward adjective, polewards adjective & adverb.
– ORIGIN late Middle English: from Latin polus 'end of an axis', from Greek polos 'pivot, axis, sky'.

pole[3] ▶ noun short for POLE POSITION.

poleaxe (US also poleax) ▶ noun another term for BATTLEAXE (in sense 1).
■ a short-handled axe with a spike at the back, formerly used in naval warfare for boarding, resisting boarders, and cutting ropes. ■ a butcher's axe with a hammer head at the back, used to slaughter animals.
▶ verb [with obj.] hit, kill, or knock down with or as if with a poleaxe.
■ (often be poleaxed) cause great shock to (someone): I was poleaxed by this revelation.
– ORIGIN Middle English: related to Middle Dutch pol(l)aex, Middle Low German pol(l)exe (see POLL, AXE). The change in the first syllable was due to association with POLE[1]; the first element poll- may have referred to a special head of the axe or to the head of an enemy.

pole barn ▶ noun a farm building which has sides consisting of poles covered with wire mesh.

pole bean ▶ noun N. Amer. a climbing bean.

polecat ▶ noun a weasel-like Eurasian mammal with mainly dark brown fur and a darker mask across the eyes, noted for its fetid smell.
● Genus Mustela, family Mustelidae: three species, in particular the European polecat (M. putorius), which is the probable ancestor of the domestic ferret.
■ North American term for SKUNK.
– ORIGIN Middle English: perhaps from Old French pole 'chicken' + CAT[1].

polecat-ferret ▶ noun a domestic ferret of a variety that has the darker colouring of the wild polecat.

pole lathe ▶ noun an ancient form of lathe operated by a treadle, in which the work is turned by a cord passing round it and rotated back by the action of a springy pole or sapling attached to the top end.

polemic /pəˈlɛmɪk/ ▶ noun a strong verbal or written attack on someone or something: his polemic against the cultural relativism of the Sixties | [mass noun] a writer of feminist polemic.
■ (usu. polemics) the art or practice of engaging in controversial debate or dispute: the history of science has become embroiled in religious polemics.
▶ adjective another term for POLEMICAL.
– DERIVATIVES polemicist noun, polemicize (also -ise) verb.
– ORIGIN mid 17th cent.: via medieval Latin from Greek polemikos, from polemos 'war'.

polemical ▶ adjective of, relating to, or involving strongly critical, controversial, or disputatious writing or speech: a polemical essay.
– DERIVATIVES polemically adverb.

polenta /pəˈlɛntə/ ▶ noun [mass noun] maize flour as used in Italian cookery; cornmeal.
■ a paste or dough made from this flour, which is boiled and typically then fried or baked.
– ORIGIN late 16th cent.: Italian, from Latin, 'pearl barley' (a sense of polenta in Old English).

pole piece ▶ noun Physics a mass of iron forming the end of an electromagnet, through which the lines of magnetic force are concentrated and directed.

pole position ▶ noun the most favourable position at the start of a motor race.
■ figurative a leading or dominant position: a company boasting the pole position in the communications business.
– ORIGIN 1950s: from a 19th-cent. use of pole in horse racing, denoting the starting position next to the inside boundary fence.

Pole Star Astronomy a fairly bright star located within one degree of the celestial north pole, in the constellation Ursa Minor. It is a double star, the bright component of which is a cepheid variable. Also called NORTH STAR, POLARIS.
■ (pole star) [as noun] figurative a thing or principle that guides or attracts people: the shop is a pole star for both actual and armchair travellers.

pole vault ▶ noun [mass noun] (the pole vault) an athletic event in which competitors attempt to vault over a high bar with the end of an extremely long flexible pole held in the hands and used to give extra spring.
■ [count noun] a vault performed in this way.
▶ verb (pole-vault) [no obj.] perform a pole vault.
– DERIVATIVES pole-vaulter noun.

police ▶ noun [treated as pl.] (usu. the police) the civil force of a state, responsible for the prevention and detection of crime and the maintenance of public order.
■ members of a police force: there are fewer women police than men. ■ [with adj. or noun modifier] an organization engaged in the enforcement of official regulations in a specified domain: transport police.
▶ verb [with obj.] [often as noun policing] (of a police force) have the duty of maintaining law and order in or for (an area or event).
■ enforce regulations or an agreement in (a particular area or domain): a UN resolution to use military force to police the no-fly zone. ■ enforce the provisions of (a law, agreement, or treaty): the regulations will be policed by factory inspectors.
– ORIGIN late 15th cent. (in the sense 'public order'): from French, from medieval Latin politia 'citizenship, government' (see POLICY[1]). Current senses date from the early 19th cent.

police constable ▶ noun see CONSTABLE.

police dog ▶ noun a dog, especially an Alsatian, trained for use in police work.

police force ▶ noun an organized body of police officers responsible for a country, district, or town.

policeman ▶ noun (pl. -men) a male member of a police force.

policeman's helmet ▶ noun the Himalayan balsam. See BALSAM (sense 2).

Police Motu ▶ noun see MOTU.

police officer ▶ noun a policeman or policewoman.

police procedural ▶ noun a crime novel in which the emphasis is on the procedures used by the police in solving the crime.

police record ▶ noun (usu. police records) a dossier kept by the police on all people convicted of crime.
■ (a police record) a personal history which includes some conviction for crime: a well-known character with a police record.

police state ▶ noun a totalitarian state controlled by a political police force that secretly supervises the citizens' activities.

– DERIVATIVES polyhedral adjective, polyhedric adjective.
– ORIGIN late 16th cent.: from Greek poluedron, neuter (used as a noun) of poluedros 'many-sided'.

polyhistor /ˌpɒlɪ'hɪstə/ ▶ noun another term for POLYMATH.
– ORIGIN late 16th cent.: from Greek poluistōr 'very learned', from polu- 'much, very' + histōr 'wise man'.

Polyhymnia /ˌpɒlɪ'hɪmnɪə/ Greek & Roman Mythology the Muse of the art of mime.
– ORIGIN via Latin from Greek, literally 'she of the many hymns'.

polyimide /ˌpɒlɪ'ɪmʌɪd/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a synthetic resin in which the polymer units are linked by imide groups, used chiefly for heat-resistant films and coatings.

polymath /'pɒlɪmaθ/ ▶ noun a person of wide-ranging knowledge or learning.
– DERIVATIVES polymathic adjective, polymathy /pə'lɪməθi/ noun.
– ORIGIN early 17th cent.: from Greek polumathēs 'having learned much', from polu- 'much' + the stem of manthanein 'learn'.

polymer /'pɒlɪmə/ ▶ noun Chemistry a substance which has a molecular structure built up chiefly or completely from a large number of similar units bonded together, e.g. many synthetic organic materials used as plastics and resins.
– DERIVATIVES polymeric adjective.
– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from German, from Greek polumeros 'having many parts', from polu- 'many' + meros 'a share'.

polymerase /'pɒlɪməreɪz, pə'lɪməreɪz/ ▶ noun Biochemistry an enzyme which brings about the formation of a particular polymer, especially DNA or RNA.

polymerize (also -ise) ▶ verb Chemistry combine or cause to combine to form a polymer.
– DERIVATIVES polymerizable adjective, polymerization noun.

polymerous /pə'lɪm(ə)rəs/ ▶ adjective Biology having or consisting of many parts.

polymetallic ▶ adjective chiefly Geology containing or involving several metals or their ores.

polymethyl methacrylate /ˌpɒlɪˌmi:θʌɪl mɪ'θakrɪleɪt, -ˌmɛθ-, -θɪl/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a glassy synthetic resin obtained by polymerizing methyl methacrylate, used to make perspex, plexiglas, and lucite.

polymict /'pɒlɪmɪkt/ ▶ adjective Geology (of a conglomerate) consisting of fragments of several different rock types.
– ORIGIN 1950s: from POLY- 'much' + Greek miktos 'mixed'.

polymorph ▶ noun an organism or inorganic object or material which takes various forms.
■ Physiology a polymorphonuclear leucocyte.

– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from Greek polumorphos, from polu- 'many' + morphē 'form'.

polymorphism ▶ noun [mass noun] the occurrence of something in several different forms, in particular:

■ Biology the occurrence of different forms among the members of a population or colony, or in the life cycle of an individual organism. ■ Genetics the presence of genetic variation within a population, upon which natural selection can operate. ■ Computing a feature of a programming language that allows routines to use variables of different types at different times.

– DERIVATIVES polymorphic adjective, polymorphous adjective.

polymorphonuclear /ˌpɒlɪˌmɔːfə(ʊ)ˈnjuːklɪə/ ▶ adjective Physiology (of a leucocyte) having a nucleus with several lobes and a cytoplasm that contains granules, as in an eosinophil or basophil.

polymorphous perversity ▶ noun [mass noun] Psychology a generalized sexual desire that can be excited and gratified in many ways, normal in young children but unusual in adults.

– DERIVATIVES polymorphously perverse adjective.

polymyositis /ˌpɒlɪmʌɪəˈ(ʊ)sʌɪtɪs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine a condition marked by inflammation and degeneration of skeletal muscle throughout the body.

polymyxin /ˌpɒlɪˈmɪksɪn/ ▶ noun Medicine any of a group of polypeptide antibiotics that are active chiefly against Gram-negative bacteria.

• Polymyxins are obtained from soil bacteria of the genus Bacillus, in particular B. polymyxa.

– ORIGIN 1940s: from modern Latin polymyxa, from Greek polu- 'much' + muxa 'slime' + -IN[1].

Polynesia /ˌpɒlɪˈniːzɪə, -ˈniːʒə/ a region of the central Pacific, lying to the east of Micronesia and Melanesia and containing the easternmost of the three great groups of Pacific islands, including Hawaii, the Marquesas Islands, Samoa, the Cook Islands, and French Polynesia.

– ORIGIN from POLY- 'many' + Greek nēsos 'island'.

Polynesian ▶ adjective of or relating to Polynesia, its people, or their languages.

▶ noun 1 a native or inhabitant of Polynesia, or a person of Polynesian descent.

polyneuritis /ˌpɒlɪnjʊəˈrʌɪtɪs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine any disorder that affects the peripheral nerves collectively.

– DERIVATIVES polyneuritic adjective.

polyneuropathy /ˌpɒlɪnjʊəˈrɒpəθi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine a general degeneration of peripheral nerves that spreads towards the centre of the body.

polynomial /ˌpɒlɪˈnəʊmɪəl/ ▶ adjective consisting of several terms.

■ Mathematics of, relating to, or denoting a polynomial or polynomials.

▶ noun Mathematics an expression of more than two algebraic terms, especially the sum of several terms that contain different powers of the same variable(s).

■ Biology a Latin name with more than two parts.

– ORIGIN late 17th cent.: from POLY- 'many', on the pattern of multinomial.

polynomial time ▶ noun [mass noun] Computing the time required for a computer to solve a problem, where this time is a simple polynomial function of the size of the input.

polynuclear ▶ adjective Chemistry (of a complex) containing more than one metal atom.

■ (of a compound) polycyclic.

polynucleotide ▶ noun Biochemistry a linear polymer whose molecule is composed of many nucleotide units, constituting a section of a nucleic acid molecule.

polynya /pə(ʊ)ˈlɪnjə/ ▶ noun a stretch of open water surrounded by ice, especially in Arctic seas.

– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from Russian, from the base of pole 'field'.

polyoma virus /ˌpɒlɪˈəʊmə/ ▶ noun Medicine any of a group of papovaviruses that are usually endemic in their host species without causing disease but which can cause tumours when injected into other species.

polyp /ˈpɒlɪp/ ▶ noun 1 Zoology a solitary or colonial sedentary form of a coelenterate such as a sea anemone, typically having a columnar body with the mouth uppermost surrounded by a ring of tentacles. In some species, polyps are a phase in the life cycle which alternates with a medusoid phase. Compare with MEDUSA.

2 Medicine a small growth, usually benign and with a stalk, protruding from a mucous membrane.

– DERIVATIVES polypous adjective (only in sense 2).

– ORIGIN late Middle English (in sense 2): from Old French polipe, from Latin polypus (see POLYPUS). Sense 1 dates from the mid 18th cent.

polypary /ˈpɒlɪp(ə)ri/ ▶ noun (pl. -ies) Zoology the common stem or skeletal support of a colony of polyps, to which the individual zooids are attached.

– ORIGIN mid 18th cent.: from modern Latin polyparium, from Latin polypus (see POLYPUS).

polypeptide ▶ noun Biochemistry a linear organic polymer consisting of a large number of amino-acid residues bonded together in a chain, forming part of (or the whole of) a protein molecule.

– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: from POLY- 'many' + PEPTONE + -IDE.

polyphagous /pəˈlɪfəgəs/ ▶ adjective Zoology (of an animal) able to feed on various kinds of food.

– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from Greek poluphagos 'eating to excess' + -OUS.

polyphase ▶ adjective consisting of or occurring in a number of separate stages.

■ (of an electrical device or circuit) designed to supply or use simultaneously several alternating currents of the same voltage and frequency but with different phases.

– DERIVATIVES polyphasic adjective.

Polyphemus /ˌpɒlɪˈfiːməs/ Greek Mythology a Cyclops who trapped Odysseus and some of his companions in a cave, from which they escaped by putting out his one eye while he slept. In another story Polyphemus loved the sea nymph Galatea, and in jealousy killed his rival Acis.

polyphenol /ˌpɒlɪˈfiːnɒl/ ▶ noun Chemistry a compound containing more than one phenolic hydroxyl group.

polyphonic ▶ adjective producing many sounds simultaneously; many-voiced.

■ Music (especially of vocal music) in two or more parts each having a melody of its own; contrapuntal. Compare with HOMOPHONIC. ■ Music (of an instrument) capable of producing more than one note at a time.

– DERIVATIVES polyphonically adverb.

– ORIGIN late 18th cent.: from Greek poluphōnos (from polu- 'many' + phōnē 'voice, sound') + -IC.

polyphony /pəˈlɪf(ə)ni/ ▶ noun (pl. -ies) [mass noun] Music the style of simultaneously combining a number of parts, each forming an individual melody and harmonizing with each other.

■ [count noun] a composition written, played, or sung in this style. ■ (on an electronic keyboard or synthesizer) the number of notes or voices that can be played simultaneously without loss.

– DERIVATIVES polyphonist noun, polyphonous adjective.

– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from Greek poluphōnia, from polu- 'many' + phōnē 'sound'.

polyphosphate ▶ noun Chemistry a salt or ester of an oxyacid with two or more phosphorus atoms in its anion, especially any of a number used chiefly as detergents or food additives.

polyphyletic /ˌpɒlɪfʌɪˈletɪk/ ▶ adjective Biology (of a group of organisms) derived from more than one common evolutionary ancestor or ancestral group and therefore not suitable for placing in the same taxon.

polypi plural form of POLYPUS.

polyploid /ˈpɒlɪplɔɪd/ Biology ▶ adjective (of a cell or nucleus) containing more than two homologous sets of chromosomes.

■ (of an organism or species) composed of polyploid cells.

▶ noun a polyploid organism, variety, or species.

– DERIVATIVES polyploidy noun.

polypod ▶ adjective Zoology having many feet or foot-like appendages, especially denoting a phase of insect larval development characterized by a segmented abdomen with rudimentary or functional appendages.

– ORIGIN mid 18th cent. (as a noun denoting an animal having many feet): from French polypode 'many-footed', from Greek polupous, polupod-, from polu- 'many' + pous, pod- 'foot'.

polypody /ˈpɒlɪpəʊdi/ ▶ noun (pl. -ies) a widely distributed fern which has stout scaly creeping rhizomes and remains green during the winter, growing on trees, walls, and stones, especially in limestone areas.

• Genus Polypodium, family Polypodiaceae: several species, in particular the common polypody (P. vulgare).

– ORIGIN late Middle English: via Latin from Greek polupodion, denoting a kind of fern, from polu- 'many' + pous, pod- 'foot'.

polypoid /ˈpɒlɪpɔɪd/ ▶ adjective 1 Zoology of, relating to, or resembling a polyp or hydra.

■ of, relating to, or denoting the polyp stage in the life cycle of a coelenterate. Also called HYDROID. Compare with MEDUSOID.

2 Medicine (of a growth) resembling or in the form of a polyp.

polypore /ˈpɒlɪpɔː/ ▶ noun a bracket fungus in which the spores are expelled through fine pores on the underside.

• Several families in the order Aphyllophorales, class Hymenomycetes, in particular Polyporaceae, which includes the beech polypore (Piptoporus (formerly Polyporus) betulinus).

polyposis /ˌpɒlɪˈpəʊsɪs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine a condition characterized by the presence of numerous internal polyps, especially a hereditary disease (familial adenomatous polyposis) which affects the colon and in which the polyps may become malignant.

polypropylene /ˌpɒlɪˈprəʊpɪliːn/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a synthetic resin which is a polymer of propylene, used chiefly for films, fibres, or moulding materials.

polyptych /ˈpɒlɪptɪk/ ▶ noun a painting, typically an altarpiece, consisting of more than three leaves or panels joined by hinges or folds.

– ORIGIN mid 19th cent.: from late Latin polyptycha (neuter plural) 'registers', from Greek poluptukhos 'having many folds', from polu- 'many' + ptukhē 'fold'.

polypus /ˈpɒlɪpəs/ ▶ noun (pl. polypi /-pʌɪ/) archaic or technical term for POLYP.

– ORIGIN late Middle English: via Latin from a variant of Greek polupous 'cuttlefish, polyp', from polu- 'many' + pous, pod- 'foot'.

polyrhythm ▶ noun Music a rhythm which makes use of two or more different rhythms simultaneously.

– DERIVATIVES polyrhythmic adjective.

polyribosome /ˌpɒlɪˈrʌɪbəsəʊm/ ▶ noun another term for POLYSOME.

polysaccharide ▶ noun Biochemistry a carbohydrate (e.g. starch, cellulose, or glycogen) whose molecules consist of a number of sugar molecules bonded together.

polysemy /ˈpɒlɪsiːmi, pəˈlɪsɪmi/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Linguistics the coexistence of many possible meanings for a word or phrase.

– DERIVATIVES polysemic adjective, polysemous adjective.

– ORIGIN early 20th cent.: from POLY- 'many' + Greek sēma 'sign'.

polysome /ˈpɒlɪsəʊm/ ▶ noun Biology a cluster of ribosomes held together by a strand of messenger RNA which each is translating.

polystyrene /ˌpɒlɪˈstʌɪriːn/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a synthetic resin which is a polymer of styrene, used chiefly as lightweight rigid foams and films.

polysulphide (US polysulfide) ▶ noun Chemistry a compound containing two or more sulphur atoms bonded together as an anion or group.

■ a synthetic rubber or other polymer in which the units are linked through such groups.

polysyllabic ▶ adjective (of a word) having more than one syllable.

■ using or characterized by words of many syllables: polysyllabic jargon.

– DERIVATIVES polysyllabically adverb.

polysyllable ▶ noun a polysyllabic word.

polysymptomatic ▶ adjective (of a disease condition or a person or animal) involving or exhibiting many symptoms.

polysynthetic ▶ adjective denoting or relating to a language characterized by complex words consisting of several morphemes, in which a single word may function as a whole sentence. Many American Indian languages are polysynthetic.

polytechnic ▶ noun an institution of higher education offering courses at degree level or below, especially in vocational subjects.
– ORIGIN early 19th cent.: from French polytechnique, from Greek polutekhnos, from polu- 'many' + tekhnē 'art'.

USAGE In Britain the term polytechnic has largely dropped out of use. This is because of the changes whereby in 1989 British polytechnics gained autonomy from local education authorities and in 1992 were able to call themselves universities.

polytene /'pɒlɪti:n/ ▶ adjective Genetics relating to or denoting a giant chromosome which is composed of many parallel copies of the genetic material, as found in Drosophila fruit flies where they are much used in genetic research.
– ORIGIN 1930s: from POLY- 'many' + -tene (from Greek tainia 'band, ribbon') denoting stages of the first meiotic division.

polytetrafluoroethylene /ˌpɒlɪˌtɛtrəˌflʊərəʊ-'ɛθɪli:n, -ˌflɔ:-/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a tough translucent synthetic resin made by polymerizing tetrafluoroethylene, chiefly used to make seals and bearings and to coat non-stick cooking utensils.

polytheism /'pɒlɪˌθi:ɪz(ə)m/ ▶ noun [mass noun] the belief in or worship of more than one god.
– DERIVATIVES polytheist noun, polytheistic adjective.
– ORIGIN early 17th cent.: from French polythéisme, from Greek polutheos 'of many gods', from polu- 'many' + theos 'god'.

polythene ▶ noun [mass noun] chiefly Brit. a tough, light flexible synthetic resin made by polymerizing ethylene, chiefly used for plastic bags, food containers, and other packaging.
– ORIGIN 1930s: contraction of POLYETHYLENE.

polythetic /ˌpɒlɪ'θɛtɪk/ ▶ adjective relating to or sharing a number of characteristics which occur commonly in members of a group or class, but none of which is essential for membership of that group or class.
– ORIGIN 1960s: from POLY- 'many' + Greek thetos 'placed, arranged' + -IC.

polytonality ▶ noun [mass noun] the simultaneous use of two or more keys in a musical composition.
– DERIVATIVES polytonal adjective.

polytunnel ▶ noun an elongated polythene-covered frame under which seedlings or other plants are grown outdoors.

polytype ▶ noun Crystallography any of a number of forms of a crystalline substance which differ only in one of the dimensions of the unit cell.
– DERIVATIVES polytypic adjective, polytypism noun.

polyunsaturated ▶ adjective Chemistry (of an organic compound, especially a fat or oil molecule) containing several double or triple bonds between carbon atoms.

polyunsaturates ▶ plural noun polyunsaturated fats or fatty acids.

polyurethane /ˌpɒlɪ'jʊərɪθeɪn/ ▶ noun [mass noun] a synthetic resin in which the polymer units are linked by urethane groups, used chiefly as constituents of paints, varnishes, adhesives, and foams.
▶ verb [with obj.] [usu. as adj. polyurethaned] coat or protect with paint or varnish of this kind.

polyuria /ˌpɒlɪ'jʊərɪə/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Medicine production of abnormally large volumes of dilute urine. Compare with DIURESIS.
– DERIVATIVES polyuric adjective.

polyvalent /ˌpɒlɪ'veɪl(ə)nt/ ▶ adjective Chemistry having a valency of three or more.
■ Medicine having the property of counteracting several related poisons or affording immunity against different strains of a micro-organism. ■ Medicine another term for MULTIVALENT. ■ figurative having many different functions, forms, or facets: as emotion, love is polyvalent.

polyvinyl /ˌpɒlɪ'vʌɪn(ə)l/ ▶ adjective [attrib.] denoting materials or objects made from polymers of vinyl compounds.

polyvinyl acetate ▶ noun [mass noun] a synthetic resin made by polymerizing vinyl acetate, used chiefly in paints and adhesives.

polyvinyl chloride ▶ noun [mass noun] a tough chemically resistant synthetic resin made by polymerizing vinyl chloride and used for a wide variety of products including pipes, flooring, and sheeting.

polyvinylpyrrolidone /ˌpɒlɪˌvʌɪn(ə)lpɪ'rɒlɪdəʊn/ ▶ noun [mass noun] Chemistry a water-soluble polymer of vinyl pyrrolidone, used as a synthetic blood plasma substitute and in the cosmetic, drug, and food-processing industries.

Polyzoa /ˌpɒlɪ'zəʊə/ Zoology another term for BRYOZOA.
– DERIVATIVES polyzoan noun & adjective.
– ORIGIN modern Latin (plural), from POLY- 'many' + zōion 'animal'.

Pom ▶ noun 1 short for POMERANIAN.
2 short for POMMY.

poma /'pəʊmə/ ▶ noun trademark a ski lift in which a pole attached to a moving cable pulls each skier uphill on their skis.
– ORIGIN 1950s: named after Jan Pomagalski (died 1969), its Polish inventor.

pomace /'pʌmɪs/ ▶ noun [mass noun] (especially in cider-making) the pulpy residue remaining after fruit has been crushed in order to extract its juice.
■ the pulpy matter remaining after some other substance has been pressed or crushed, for example castor oil seeds after the oil has been extracted.
– ORIGIN late 16th cent.: apparently from medieval Latin pomacium 'cider', from Latin pomum 'apple'.

pomade /pə'meɪd, -'mɑ:d/ dated ▶ noun [mass noun] a scented ointment applied to the hair or scalp.

– DERIVATIVES prepositional adjective, prepositionally adverb.

– ORIGIN late Middle English: from Latin praepositio(n-), from the verb praeponere, from prae 'before' + ponere 'to place'.

USAGE There is a traditional view, first set forth by the 17th-century poet and dramatist John Dryden, that it is incorrect to put a preposition at the end of a sentence, as in where do you come from? or *she's not a writer I've ever come across. The rule was formulated on the basis that, since in Latin a preposition cannot come after the word it governs or is linked with, the same should be true of English. The problem is that English is not like Latin in this respect, and in many cases (particularly in questions and with phrasal verbs) the attempt to move the preposition produces awkward, unnatural-sounding results. Winston Churchill famously objected to the rule, saying 'This is the sort of English up with which I will not put.' In standard English the placing of a preposition at the end of a sentence is widely accepted, provided the use sounds natural and the meaning is clear.

Pre-Raphaelite /priːˈrafəlʌɪt/ ▶ noun a member of a group of English 19th-century artists, including Holman Hunt, Millais, and D. G. Rossetti, who consciously sought to emulate the simplicity and sincerity of the work of Italian artists from before the time of Raphael.

Seven young English artists and writers founded the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood in 1848 as a reaction against the slick sentimentality and academic convention of much Victorian art. Their work is characterized by strong line and colour, naturalistic detail, and often biblical or literary subjects. The group began to disperse in the 1850s, and the term became applied to the rather different later work of Rossetti, and that of Burne-Jones and William Morris, in which a romantic and decorative depiction of classical and medieval themes had come to predominate.

▶ adjective of or relating to the Pre-Raphaelites.

Presbyterianism ▶ noun [mass noun] a form of Protestant Church government in which the Church is administered locally by the minister with a group of elected elders of equal rank, and regionally and nationally by representative courts of ministers and elders.

Presbyterianism was first introduced in Geneva in 1541 under John Calvin, in the belief that it best represented the pattern of the early church. There are now many Presbyterian Churches (often called Reformed Churches) worldwide, notably in the Netherlands and Scotland and in countries with which they have historic links (including the United States and Northern Ireland). They typically subscribe (more or less strictly) to the Westminster Confession.

presbytery /ˈprɛzbɪt(ə)ri/ ▶ noun (pl. -ies) 1 [treated as sing. or pl.] a body of Church elders and ministers, especially (in Presbyterian Churches) an administrative body (court) representing all the local congregations of a district.
